WORTHY SIR,

ITs now more then eleven, and not full twelve yeers, since my good Angel directed me to your happie acquaintance: Since which time, I have ever admired those your excellent Parts in Chimistry, and accounted it no small blessing to our Nation, that a man so learned, and born so remote from us, as Hungary is from England, should live and continue amongst us English, and willingly give production to such rare Learning as your self hath really done.

I love you not more for that exquisite knowledge
God hath enabled you with, then for that innate candour and sincerity of heart which I have always observed in you. Is he living, and an honest man, that can say or complain you have performed lesse then you undertook: an Honour truely and really befitting your self, but few else, if any at all, Professors in Chimistry.
The Hermeticall Philosophers have great cause to esteem

you,

you; for your own particular skill, experience, industry, ingenuity, modesty, reall perfection of sublime matters and conclusions, far above vulgar capacities, hath made the world abroad, and the English Nation at home, sensibly know and discern, there's a validity and worth in that Art, which was shrewdly suspected before; whereby you have gained that esteem, both in England, and transmarine parts; That in this last Age, no man hath attained more, hardly any have parallel'd the learned Huniades.

God Almighty adde more yeers and knowledge unto you; and sith you will leave us (we being not worthy of you) he direct you in safety, untill you happily arrive to Claudianopolis, the Sepulchre of your fore-fathers. We shall be thankfull in England, that you have watered many hopefull Plants, and besprinkled the understandings of many our Countrey-men with some of your curious Conceptions: So that although in person you leave us, we shall have cause to remember, that sometimes here lived amongst us, Johannes Banfi Huniades Hermetice Philosophia indagator solertissimus, whose usuall word was, Est in Mercurio quicquid querunt sapientes.

Sir, my self shall account it no mean respect, if, as formerly, so still, you vouchsafe me your wonted love, and undertake the Patronage of this Book, written

By your Astrologicall
English Friend,
William Lilly.
To

To all of the English Nation, that are Lovers of Astrologie, His Majestie, the Priviledges of Parliament, just Liberties of the City of London, and Commonalty of England.

William the magnificent Earl of Pembroke had not much reason to undervalue the Genethliack part of Astrologie, because (as himself reported) one very able in that kind affirmed he should not reach one and fifty yeers; and now, quoth he, (thanks be to heaven) I have lived one and fifty yeers and one day: But the next morning he was taken with an Apoplexie, whereof that good man instantly died. What an horrible error was here? or what cause had this Gentleman to insult over our Art? Si quis hæc & similia prima fronte non intelligat, hunc oro ut nobiscum prius conferat, quam suum judicium de rebus non intellectis ferat. It is not the investitive Divine, who sometimes consumes a precious hour in consultation of Astrologie, when perhaps not three of his auditors, or himself, know what it is; or that Changeling of Oxford, who calls me Impudent for imputing his Majestie to his Parliament, and Senselesse, because I would reduce those strayed sheep, those separated Members, into the right sheepfold; or the viperous aspersion of a flattering lying Mercury, cast upon all the Merclines of these times, can, I say, any thing deter me. Paratus ad omnia, & contra omnes. In point of Art, I challenge all the rabble of the Scorefull. I live not by gybing and jeering my Sovereign, or playing the Sycophant, in loading some with magnified Epithites of Honour; a Generation most unfortunate in our Commonwealth. The native affection I bear to my King and Countrey, puts the Pen into my hand, else I had buried my Conceptions when they first budded. Astrologie, for many yeers, what with the prevaricate opinion of some scrupulous Clergie-men, and the impostures of some other pretended Astrologers, was cast into that obloquie, few would believe any such thing was in rerum natura. Many also conceived we maintained a fatall necessity; a monstrous and terrible Mistake. Not one Author in our Art, whose Works are extant now above the earth, or ever were, was of so corrupt a judgement. We unanimously say, Providence is the Governesse of all things, and that things are effected by Providence, not as necessary, but as contingent. What is he, or his name, that is of us, and saith, Events do necessarily ensue upon those things in our power? The Mercurian Vermines of the times must scandalize us, although we hold nothing falls out necessarily, but that it may either be so or not so, as God pleaseth, who is not concluded under any necessity, or his will confined by fatall necessity; for he is Creator of necessity it self. Give us leave to explain our selves, and we say, that God laid necessity upon the Stars, and they are constrained to keep those regular courses he first limited. These are no Heresies, or am I a Schismatick if I say, God stayed once the course of the Sun and Moon, whereby he shewed, he is not confined to necessity, but that according to his power all things are contingent. I let these things passe. The English Nation are much stumbled with and concerning the birth of Esau and Jacob; and S. Augustine sweats in Civitate Dei, and in his Confessions, about it: But if either he, or any now living for him, can make it appear those Twins were born, Uno eodemque enixu temporis, he speaks to purpose; else he hurts us not. It was yet never known, any woman to be delivered of twins at the same instant moment of time; there's always an interval of sometimes one hour, two hours, three, more or lesse; never scarce under one hour, and both live. Of unnaturall Births, or cut out of the mothers womb, or Monsters, which are the errors of Nature, we meddle not. Its said in Genes. 25. Prodiit autem prior rufus: so here: Esau first born. Vers. 26. Postea vero prodiit frater ejus; after some time Jacob is born, cujus manus tenebat calcaneum Hesaii. Let all the Antagonists or Midwives in the world shew me an example where one Twin held the other by the heel in the mothers womb, and yet both mother and children escape.

This was a supernaturall Birth, and not to be parallel'd in the regular course of Nature: We onely undertake naturall Births, and not miraculous, &c. The small conceit and opprobrious judgement the English Nation have of Astrologie, had also almost enforced me to silence: But considering its rather want of Books fitted for the capacities of our English, then any wilfull defect in their understandings, I will write not onely now, but, if God spare me life, I will make this Art hereafter perceivable to the meaneest, and usefull for every vulgar capacity, I hope to the content of the whole Kingdom. Admit these my succeeding Predictions should fail, as they well may, it breeds no Heresie, no Schism: Consider, we that live within this City know not the dally passages thereof in every part thereof, nor can any relate them truly. For Gods sake, let us then have some favour assigned us, if we misse, that fetch our judgements from the Stars, seated in the Heavens: Its a great way thither, you all know. Do we make a Rent in the Church, or disjoynt an Arm, or lop off a Branch? Ten thousand errors in Astrologie, summed up altogether with many more, make not up one Heresie.

Many desire to know what I am, what my Religion, how I stand affected to His Majestie, to His Cause; to the Parliament at Westminster, and their Cause.

I was native of Diseworth in Leicester shire, and so a Bean-belly. I have cause to blesse God, and so I do, that I ever came to the City of London, which I did the 9 of April, 1620. with an hundred pence in my purse, and no more: Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum: I am now as I am; have a competency:
And yet if any Gentleman or man of quality desire it, I am content to read Astrologie, any part thereof, or to give further satisfaction, &c. I was Scholar to M. Brinsley of Ashby de la Zouch: all of my form are singular Divines, &c. If an enemy approach this Citie, I'll do my best for London, as Bonatus did for Forolivium, which when Pope Martin strictly besieged, and offered the Citizens bad Conditions, the Astrologer advised to patience, and upon an elected time, commanded his Citizens to issue and charge the enemies, which they did, & vicinus omnes, saith he; we routed them all, and so freed the City of an insulting foe, and potent adversaires.

My Religion is according to the Reformed Protestant Church of England: and although my conversation and dealing in the World hath casually fallen out to be more with the Papist then Protestant (for I am not unknown to Franciscus de Sancta Clara, a most learned man: the liberty of the times I lived in, gave me leave and opportunity to converse with many Franciscans, in whom I found much reality; the Secular Priest I ever found a very good fellow, and not scrupulous; the Jesuite I never fancied, or much the Dominican: some have accused me for a Church-Papist) yet I professe before Almighty God, I never did incline to any one Popish Tenent, nor did any of the learned I ever met withall, seek my conversion unto them. In these unsettled times, I almost stand unresolved in what posture to steer my course. I read the Bible, run over the 39. Articles: But in points now controverted, I rigidly adhere to that pious Tract of Master Hildersham, upon the fourth of John: He can be no Separatist that judiciously reads that learned mans Works: He was as knowing a man in his time, as any now living. I was none of those that distracted or disturbed the Parliament about the Earl of Strafford, or ever cried Episcopacie down, or Presbytery up. I have subscribed to all Petitions for Peace, except that of the Virago faction. I gave my voice for Sir Gilbert Gerrard and Sir John Franklyn, Knights of the Shire for Middlesex; I hope they will prove honest Members. Peace, above all earthly blessings, do I wish to this Kingdom. I see deeper into a Millstone then many, and know by what Faction we are divided. I should be glad to see a sickly Commonwealth preserved and restored. Iniquissima Pax, justissimo Bello ante ferenda. We shall finde it so. I cannot cleave an hair in sunder; yet I see Peace is convenient. I see ruine approaching, the furious Angels Sword drawn: Here's not a David to pray, nor an Abraham to intercede. In my Nativity I have Venus in Taurus, in Gazimi with the Sun; I have Mercury in Taurus, and Mars in Virgine, two earthly Signes, the reason why my Conceptions are so dull, and my Speech and Discourse so defective: I have Jupiter in Libra, neer Spica Virginis, and Saturn in Scorpio, the Moon in Piscibus: I am a piece of a good fellow; my heart is larger then my fortune, and yet I live contented amidst all vexatious Taxes, of which I partake too often. I love money as my servant, I adore it not for my master: I rather give then take, and pities where I cannot relieve. I partly foresee the evil event of these Inestime Jars: I would willingly contradict the naturall course thereof. My Chymaericall year of seven is to me troublesome; my Enneaticall yeer perilous and sickly: I am drawing neer one: the grand Mutations of my whole life ever begun in one of these. To the day of the writing hereof, and its the 12 of December 1644, I have run over more days then fifteen thousand five hundred and fifty nine: Before I attain sixteen thousand four hundred and twenty two dayes, I shall be in great hazard of my life: But that yeer which afflicts me, will stagger a Monarchy and a Kingdom. Its hard to expresse what Anima mundi is, and yet Unicumque impressus character divinus.

I highly prize Monarchy, and extremely respect the Majestie and Honour attending it.

It. I have just cause, and I do cordially esteeme His Majestie now living, and His posterity : the War he maintains and countenanceth against His English and Scottish Subjects, I totally abhor : the end will be bitter. He was the worst of men, that advised his Majestie to decline his presence from Westminster, and his Parliament there residing ; Let that man die childlesse, and his hoar head not go to the Grave or the Sepulchre of his fathers in quiet. But this was decreed long since, and he the instrumentall means of an unhappie Scourge to the English and Scottish people.

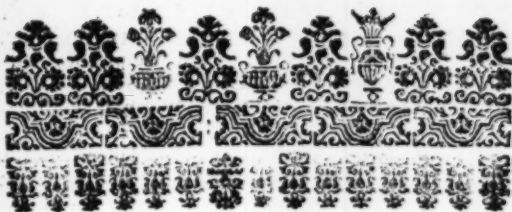

o This present Parliament is either a true one, or a false one : If it be a true one, are now his Majestie hath acknowledged (as it was also before) how vile and unthankfull are they that desert it, and worse that labour to destroy it ? The subsistence of this, is either our making or undoing : If we shrink from this, we are slaves ; let us support it, and we subsist upon Conditions. I have ever stood firm unto it ; and still do ; and will to my death. The failings of private men, or some of their own Members entrusted by them (of whom we after hear ill tydings) puts me sometimes into a fit of fury ; but my recollected thoughts correct me without Hellebor. Its possible, could they but agree, to make them more glorious, and their actions more illustrious : Self-ends have too much dishonoured that sometimes-glorious State, which formerly men admired, and almost worshipped. The long attendance of Senators is generally disliked, &c. Should I speak Verity in its proper Colours, it might procure me a lodging in Newgate, but no Office to help my maintenance : it might procure me a suppression from ever writing any more. I am almost more plunged to get my Book licensed, then others to print twenty ; and yet no exceptions in point of Art is taken, but against my expressions : I cannot flatter, I will not : To mince my judgement, and deliver ambiguous stuff, is to lessen the validity of Art. I stand upon the honour of my Nation, and somewhat upon my own repute, &c. I must either speak more then an Angel, or lesse then a Man : Speak what I can, I content not all am understood by few, sentenced by all : Is there one of a thousand a competent judge for our Art ? For the Discourse ensuing, its derived from the Rules of Astrologie ; the successe and verity thereof will either speak much for it self, or else it deceives me : Yet I tell thee, I never hold that Merchant wise, which adventures all his stock in one Bottom. I would provoke others to do their endeavours as well as my self, and in such a Dialect as its capable of understanding, and not in ambodextreous language, the fault of our predecessors, and of some now living. As this Moneth, the later part thereof, and the beginning of January proved, so believe of the succeeding Moneths. Reader, pray for the peace of England, and safety of the City of London. I have much to say, for the benefit of my Countrey ; but being curbed in my expressions, I purposely omit what was intended, and silently rest,

HIS MAJESTIE

OR

PARLIAMENT

may expect in these their
now-differences,

By William Lilly, 1645.

His ensuing discourse I now put forth, hath beginning from the tenth day of December, 1644. at what time the Sun entred Capricorn: In the Scheam of Heaven erected for that moment, you may finde the Sun lately separated from an Opposition of Mars, as if some sturdy action in word or deed had lately passed, or suddenly would ensue, not greatly pleasing, either to His Majestie or the Parliament; and the actions in light skirmishes, in By-paths, or traversing the Countrey, and not in any set Field : the aforesaid Opposition being seconded with the like Aspect of Mercury to Mars, doth Astrologically also prenote much Treachery, Robbing, Roving, Passing and Repassing from one place to another; much losse to the poor Carrier and Countrey-men, by Highway-men, Theeves, &c. It was for these Reasons Master Booker gave that Caution, Cave ab homine trium literarum, so ill understood by Master Naworth. In this Figure I finde no Planet angular but Venus: yet considering the times now present, and the correspondency betwixt this Winter Sheam, and that of the preceding Spring, the Angles all fixed, and the three Superiours all ill collocaded; the Moon lately separated from a Quadrate of the Sun, and applying to Opposition of Saturn; it prenoteth some ill chance, damage, losse, or unluckinesse, either lately to have happened, or immediately after, to those signified by the tenth House, viz. To some principall person or persons; Kings, Princes, Commanders, Chief-Officers, Governours of Towns, Castles, Forts, &c. Magistrates, &c. Forasmuch as Mars doth afflict the Cusp of the ninth, and Luna is Lady of Cancer intercepted; some new unlucky Differences, Combustions, and the like, may be feared to arise amongst us, hatcht and contrived by the Schismaticall, who now begin to threaten, and by whom we more suffer, then by our enemies. But to see how equally the heavens at this time are balanced, it makes me admire; for if the Parliament shall have subsistence, as is signified by Venus her position; His Majestie cannot want support; for the Dragons Head is in the tenth House. The plain English sense is, That both the one and the other shall have so much subsistence, as in fine we shall all miserably repent it. These Judgements are occasionally, and ought to manifest themselves in December, January, and February, which cannot passe without grand Mutation in our Commonwealth.

Of the Lunar Eclipse, 31. January.

6. Hor. 56. Min. P. M. 4.

THe three Superiours in the Figure, are all now direct, having lately suffered by their Retrogradation : Its something too early to expect much action, the unseasonable condition of the Weather observed ; yet Mars culminating, and not far removed from some violent fixed Stars of his own influence, produceth fighting, skirmishing, flushing and cutting, and but a troublesome time, either to King or Parliament. The Digits Eclipsed are nine : It will appear a reasonable great Eclipse, if the obscure Weather hinder not. The Sign Passive and afflicted is Leo, a Regall, Royall, Majestickall one, the degree of the Sign is 22. 36. minutes.

The quarter of Heaven is East, inclining to the South. Its in the Asterism of Leo, and will indure three whole hours and one half, and three minutes. The Moon is not far from Basilium, in Longitude she is in a manner with Lucida Hydra.

The fiery Trygon is Passive in this Eclipse, viz. Aries Leo, Sagittarius, according to the Ptolomeian Doctrine, and those Kingdoms, Countreys, Cities, and Men, which are subject to that Triplicity : Latter Writers have, I conceive more properly, adjudged those men or Kingdoms to participate in the infelicity of an Eclipse, which have any sign, in Quadrate or Opposition to the signe Eclipsed : Which if it be granted, they who have Taurus, Scorpio, or Aquarius, the ascendant signe of their Nativity, or culminating, shall be sensible in one kinde or other, of the influence of this Lunar one.

Italy, Spain, England, Germany, France, and many other Countreys are designed by Ptolomey to the fiery Triplicity : Latter Writers have refined these Divisions, and have added many Cities and Countreys to this Trygon, which who list to peruse, may read them exactly collected by Master Booker in his Almanack of 1643. and 1644.

In as much as the duration is three hours and one half, the actions signified by this Eclipse shall operate three monerhs and one half, or about one hundred and seven dayes, and shall begin about the third, fourth, and fifth dayes of April, and not before, if belief be had to Ptolomey; as in handling the Eclipse in August next I shall manifest; to whose opinion I cannot consent, no more then Origanus, fol. 466. But of this hereafter.

The principall Ruler in the place Eclipsed, is Jupiter, having in the signe a Triplicitie, and in the degree a Term (but no domum, as gentle Master Wharion writes) Mercury in the Angle preceding, and succeeding, is most powerfull, and yet Mars is absolutely the strongest, most elevated, and best fortified in the whole Scheam; and who shall with Jupiter and Mercury, materially designe out the portent of the Eclipse, consideratis considerandis. In effect, it speaks thus; That the poor Commonalty of England, by reason of the situation and affliction of the Moon in the twelfth House, shall sorrowfully lament their unfortunate condition, their infinite pressures, and burdensome oppressions; their extream poverty, wants, necessities, sufferings, heavy taxes, beleeving now these mischiefs to be permanent, and fixed, as the signes do manifest: Now they mistrust they are inthrall'd, and slaved in their Liberties and Priviledges; they will be apt to mutter, murmur, mutiny, grumble, and repine, against their Superiours, and not without much unwillingnesse be brought to a better temper: And yet as some are prenoted to be thus Male-content, to be thus dejected, and in so ill a condition; So again, the proximity of the Moon to Lucida Hydra, shall erect and lift up the spirits of some vulgar persons to good preferment, and that with a kinde of ferocitie or impudent boldnesse: Here is signification during the time of the effects of this Eclipse, that many men shall be imprisoned, many privately slandered, the names and reputations of many gallant men, unjustly called to question; it deprives many men of their haughtie ayms, and high conceptions; and levels their honour and fortune with the ground; It robs the Countrey Farmer of his greater Cattle, Cattle, it destroyes his provition, and in dangers his person; its the forerunner of a sickness, of a mischievous designe against the honest hearted Protestant.

Now forasmuch as Jupiter is by place in the ninth, and rules the degree Eclipsed, and is in Partill Quadrate both with the Sun and Moon; its an Argument, that both the Magistrate and the people shall be extreemly bent against some factious Separatists, or it may denote some remarkable accident to happen in the Synod, concerning settling Religion, or hot disputes amongst themselves: Some Gentlemen, some of the Nobility, are threatened by this Eclipse. Certainly the greatest signification of this Eclipse, seems to spend it self, or primarily intends differences in the Clergy. Although war and frequent messages will occasionally intervene, Venus disposeth of Jupiter, and applies to his Tryne Aspect; but unluckily she is frustrated in part of that benevolent Aspect, by the malevolent prohibition of Saturn his Quadrature, or ere she can come to a perfect Tryne: Either some Ambassadour or the like, or some Missives, are hereby intended to do us good, and to bring our sorrows to a period; but this treacherous Aspect seems to impedit all, by a slight and dreaming trick, or some cunning politique ends. Shall the honest designs of the cordially well disposed for peace be still made void? Theres some unhappy Families, some untoward Generation of men amongst us have almost consumed us, and our Kingdom, O utinam tandem post diuturnas disceptationes, ac longas perturbationes concordia in religione fiat. Would to God at length, after such continuall disputations, and long perturbations, there may be concord in Religion. But sith Mercury is Peregrine, and applies to a square of Mars, without a miracle (and we have now but few) all Treaties, or goodnesse by Treaties, for the present seem to be fruitlesse; for Mars poysons and intoxicates all our good pretences, and we differ upon I know not what curiosities; so that if you give credit to Proclus, you may expect, Captivitates obsidiones, direptiones, & adium sacrarum profanationem Let us look to hear of Captivities, Besiegings, Plunderings, and Prophanation of Churches and Holy Things: But seeing a Lunar Eclipse is not so considerable, and that there will be a Solar one in this Revolution, I forbear further proceeding herein, and come to the Sun's Ingress into Aries, 1645.

FOrmerly amongst the Ancients there was some dispute concerning that point of time from whence the Astrologer should begin and derive his judgement for the yeer ensuing; it was some yeers debated, and not fully concluded from which of the four Cardinall points we should make beginning, untill Ptolomey his time, who reconciled all differences, in Lib. 2. Cap. II. Non incongrue itaque principium anni vernum equinoctium statuerunt; quod nunc primum diei spatia prorabi incipiunt, & tempus illud natura sua humectat. Those that ordained the beginning of the yeer from the Vernall Equinoctiall, or when the Sun first enters Aries, did not inconsiderately, for then first of all, the dayes begin to exceed the nights in length, and nature moistens at that time all her Vegetables, &c.

This difference having obtained reconcilment, another more nice and curious one appeared, and was stiffly contended tended betwixt the Indian, Greek, Jew, Egyptian, and Arabick Astrologers, viz. How and by what means to finde out the Lord of the year, from whom especially the most significant occurrences must be derived.

Some would consider when the Sun entred the twentieth degree of Scopia, and frame a Figure for that point of time, out of which they would elect the Lord of the year, and these were the Indians, and some learned Chaldeans.

This was contradicted by the most judicious, both Syrians, Indians, and Egyptians, as having no solid foundation, but barely observed by Tradition; nor did they approve of their resolutions, that would have the Lord of the year from the Positure of the Sun his entrance into Libra.

Some Centuries of years these points were in controversy, and nothing positively concluded, each Nation using that form and manner their Predecessors left them; untill Ptolomey, who lived about the first Century of years after Christ, with great reason and judgement committed to posterity that method which I intend to deliver, not yet contradicted, but long since approved by Haly the Egyptian, Zael the Ishmaelite, and Alkindus the most learned of all the Arabians (from whose learned Works is derived that excellent knowledge now so much usefull, called Algebra) &c. But concerning the point in question.

I say Ptolomeis sense is delivered unto us by Escuidus, and some others; but most plainly by Junctinus, fol. 1159. Dominus anni assumi debet ab eo qui habuit majus posse & dominium in loco praeventionis vel conjunctionis Luminarium praecedentis introitus Solis in Arietem, & ab eo qui dominatur in ascendente illius conjunctionis vel praeventionis. The Lord of the year ought to be assumed from that Planet, who hath most force and strength in the place of the Lights, either preventionall or postventionall to the Sun his entrance into Aries, and from that Planet that rules in the Ascendant of that Conjunction or Opposition.

Ptolomeus teaches the same way in his 10. cap. lib. 2. in electing the Lord of the four severall Quarters of the year; to which I refer you.

The Preventionall Full Moon before the Sun his in-grefse this year happens the first of March, the second degree of Cancer ascending: The Sun in twenty two degrees and eighteen minutes of Pisces; the Moon in twenty two degrees and eighteen minutes of Virgo: Mercury hath onely predominancy in the place of the Moon, but Mars governs the Luminary of the time, and the Ascendant it self being not five degrees elongated from thence: Dixit Ptolomæus & dicunt multi sapientes, quod Planeta non dicitur cadere ab Angulis, & cuspilibus domorum in themate Cœlesti, nisi elongatur ab eis per quinque gradus Junstinus, fol. 1136. tom. primi. A Planet is not cadent from an Angle, or the Cusps of Houses, as Ptolomey and many wise men say, unlesse he be distant five degrees from thence: This is onely to catechise G.W. a Western Rabbi, and yet an Idiot in Astrology. Mars principally sways the precedent Luration before the Ingresse. At the Ingresse, Mars commands the tenth House, and hath exaltation in the Ascendant: In the Postventionall New Moon, the 17. of March he disposeth of the Sun and Moon, and is in Quadrature to them both, most elevated in the Figure; in Longitude he leisurely paceth to the lesser Dog-Star: In this last Luration Venus participateth; but being an inferiour Planet, quick in motion, somewhat weakened by Mercury, Oriental, and in the Mediery descending, I give the rule of this Vernall Quarter principally to Mars, and do also nominate him Lord of the yeer; yet not so, but that Jupiter in this Vernall season shall have some dominion, and other Planets have their shares in the Solstice, Autumnall, and Winter Quarter. My meaning is wholly this, that Mars shall most effectually declare the most eminent actions of this and other seasons: Of which anon.

The Ascendant of this Ingresse is Capricornus, a moveable Signe, and not fixed: So shall the actions of this year fall out: Etiam oportet quod considerentur ascendencia incapsulationum annorum, quæ si fuerint mobilia revolvuntur quartæ anni, & judicentur secundum quartarum anni ascendencia earum; quia non est in ascendentibus revolutionum earum virtus cum fuerit signum anni mobile, quia illud significat multitudinem alterationis in illo anno secundum sessionem quartarum eorum: Junstinus de Revolutione An. Mundi. fol. 1158.

We ought to consider the Ascendants of the beginning of yeers, which if they be moveable, the Quarters of the year will much vary, and you must judge according to their severall Ascendants; for when a moveable Signe ascends, there's no great vertue therein; it doth signifie a multitude of alteration that year, according to the severall Positures of each Quarter. A maxime so true, as truth it self: Certainly, although the uncertain and mutable actions of these times, are principally guided by a supernaturall, all seeing, and knowing providence, far above mans capacity, yet we have no reason but to admire nature, who significantly expresse, by her Starry Ministers, a sense or similitude of such like Casualties, Chances and Accidents; For the Ascendant of the Full Moon before the Ingresse, that of the Ingresse, of the New Moon succeeding, are all moveable Signes; From hence producing the various and oft contingent consequences of this whole Spring-Quarter, and the too too oft changeable Affairs (I fear) of the whole year after. The Arabians have introduced a method, of distinguishing betwixt King and People: It might be of some better use in these turbulent times, if rightly made use of; for by the Figure or Figures of Heaven, they conceived it possible to tell before hand, the successe belonging to King or People; when we have probable hopes of good successe before hand promised us, it might encourage our Souldiers to attempt greater actions: If the Heavens be averse, more caution must be had, and fit election of times framed, to contradict and weaken the malevolent influence. I speak not in Clouds, but am fearfull I shall be understood in a Mist. Ptolomeus tamen & Arabi & major pars sapientum introductorum & estimatorum seu clarorum in hac scientia; Ponunt ascendens revolutionis & Lunam significatores populi: Et decimam & ejus dominum & solem & Almutem super decimam significatores regis, & secundam domum significatricem substantiarum populi, & undecimam substantia regis, &c. Haly 365.

Which in effect tells us, that the Ascendant and the Moon are Significators of the people: The tenth house, the Lord thereof, the Sun, and Almuten of the tenth, are Significators of Kings, Hermes. I well remember, ever admits of Saturn, and that Planet that is casually in the tenth tenth house, into the judgement. The second house intimates the substance of the people; the eleventh, of Kings.

These Particulars carefully examined, we shall from thence derive a probable Conjecture of the affairs incident to our English Common-wealth, so far as the weak capacity of man is able in a Naturall way to discern.

Its now the tenth of March, 1645. the thirteenth and seventeenth dayes follow orderly. Methinks we begin our progresse according to the usuall manner, with disgusts, breaches, distractions, some calamitous action wherein blood is spilt, and mens lives lost: Let us hearken to Haly, fol. 366. He commands to consider the defluxion of the Moon, and how she applies in the next Conjunction or Opposition preceding the ingresse into Aries, whether to a Fortune or Infortune; the strength or debility of that or those Planets, in signe and quarter of heaven. She here applies to a Trine of Jupiter in the twelfth, and he fixed in an earthly Signe, in Conjunction with many violent fixed Stars repugnant to his own nature; nor hath he any dignity in the place where he is: We may therefore, about those times, have but a glimpse or shadow of the good influence he usually affordeth: For, existentibus benevolis in signis in quibus non habent dignitatem, transfundetur eorum benignitas. Hermes, Apho. 59. Planets being in Signes wherein they have no dignities, their benignity is extinguished. The true meaning from that Aphorism to be collected, is: The fair probability that we may expect of attaining Peace, Accommodation, bettering of our misfortunes, and converting our miseries into more blessed dayes, by the then Agitations on foot, or likely to be: And in truth Jupiter intimates, Quod populus eris in bono statu, & mutabitur de bono in bonum, habebis justitias & securitates, &c. Haly, 367. The application of the Moon to Trine of Jupiter, imports the people shall be in a good state, and have one blessing after another, shall enjoy Justice, Security, &c. I repeat not this as to prove such things, shall now come to passe; for, as I said the last yeer, the times varying, the Astrologer must be more considerate, and not, upon a single testimony, pronounce Peace, War, or the like: I say therefore, This benevolent Aspect shall afford us no more then a probability, or expectation, or lingring desire after Peace, Justice, Safety of our goods and persons; but not the things themselves really performed, which we expect. And if you will know the reason in our Art, it is because of Jupiter his impotency, and the unfortunate Quadrature of the Moon to Mars, within the limits of the Ascendant. He that may, will not; they that would, cannot.

Discord amongst our Nobles, Dissention amidst our Armies, Divisions betwixt our Senatours, Consuls, and greatest Counsellours, gives us the first Check to these our expectant Joys: But hearken, Si applicatio Luna fuerit ad Martem, & ille in signo humano, erunt interfectiones, & sanguinis effusiones: If the Moon apply to Mars, and he in a Humane Signe, there is portended much Slaughter to ensue. What is this, with other Circumstances considered, but an Argument our Warres shall not yet determine, and that the Souldier shall yet continue amongst us? A probable Conjecture I also frame, and will maintain it to be true in Art, by the nearnesse of Mars to the Ascendant, in a double-bodied Signe, That there is signified, that we have more Treacherous amongst us then one; they are not all fled, nor all plundered, nor all yet discovered; they lurk in our own bosome, feed at our tables, have credit amongst us: but we either wink, or wilfully omit to take notice of them.

But woe to that man who is signified by Mercury, placed in the tenth with Cauda Draconis, who is neither faithfull to His Majestie, or trustie to the Parliament. Shall we never be rid of Treasons, or His Majestie freed from scandalous Aspersions? The losse of one head is too little for the many Abuses some Fire-brands perpetrate, &c. Had I Encouragement from above, I would give Comfort below; for in the Postventionall Lunation, the Moon and Sun are in the sixth, she separated from a Square of Mars, and hastening to a Conjunction of Saturn. Out of Gods blessing, we fall into the warm Sun. Out of the frying-pan, into the fire. He may laugh, that wins; but he that loseth all, may be melancholly, sad, and almost out of his wits, for sorrow of such like Casualties. Accidit populo damna & molestia, ex parte dominorum suorum, infirmitates multae, multa, & pauca pluvia, & pluent pluvia in temporibus non aptis & novicis, & in temporibus in quibus essent necessaria, non pluent, Hily, 367. The Commonalty and vulgar man undergo much damage by means of their Superiours, shall be sensible of many Sickneses; there will not be much rain, or few showers; yet it shall rain at unseasonable times, when no need is, and forbear when it would be most usefull. A signe God is angry with us, when he deprives us of the benefits of his creatures in opportune seasons. Nay, the words stretch to this sense, That we shall be most busie and active when least necessity is, and too remisse when fit opportunities require, &c. This postventinall new Moon, is the hand-maid of some unluckie Counsels, destructive Intendments, of pernicious Diseases, of some mutinous and preposterous Disturbances among the English, as well Royallists, as Parliamentarians. Is not Mercury with Venus, and the Moon combust, and then posting to Saturn in the seventh? Will some feeble-hearted Commander surrender a Town or Fort, or lose a good Party, by Cowardize, and vapour upon it that he could do no more, when in truth it is probable he never did any thing? They that are conversant in Astrologie, may observe the strange Posture of heaven, both in the Preventionall and Postventionall Lunation. In the first, you finde all the Planets above the earth, the Moon excepted: at the Ingresse, she onely above the earth, applying to a Square of the Sun, Sextile of Venus and Mercury, then to an Opposition of Mars. Let me not live if it please me, that I finde Mars the Significatour of His Majestie, in his fall, in the sixth, in almost partill Quadrature to the Sun; nor do I rejoyce to see Saturn Lord of the Ascendant, cadent, in his fall; or the Moon in the twelfth, in Square to the Sun. These Aspects, Configurations, and severall Positions, coincident with many others as malevolent, are the naturall Prognosticks, in our Language of the Stars, to many very formidable Accidents impending, and ready to fall upon the heads of us poor English (if God Almighty, in more then a miraculous way, encline not our hearts to conclude a Peace.) Let who will get the Day, here is no cause of mirth promised to either side. Can I by this Posture of heaven predict Wonders, or all Victory on either side? Have not I eyes to see the Dragons Tail in the Ascendant? And have I not so much sense yet left me, as informs my understanding we have a whole Jury of Dissemblers and Hypocrites yet sitting and abiding with us, and not discovered? The Ancients do tell us; Cauda in Aquario, significat inquisitionem Regis contra dominos hereditarium, in hoc quod non debent, & seductionem eorum in censu: atque injurias & afflictiones quas exercebit contra eos, cum captione eorum, & flagellatione, Guido Bonat. fol. 591. When the Dragons tail falls out in a Revolution to be posited in Aquarius, Kings shall be inquisitive after the Inheritances of men, imposing many Taxes upon them, to procure Money, which they ought not to do; that they shall do much injury against such men on whose Inheritances they seize; that they shall cavill with some, captive others, and punish others.-----Cauda in primo, significat detrimentum hominum, & separationem boni, & eradicationem, & pericula, & tribulationes. Cauda placed in the Ascendant, imports damage to man, a separation of goodnesse, and danger, &c. He proceeds to tell us further, that if Cauda were so posited in the Revolution of any mans Nativity, it portended, though he were very rich, he should waste and consume his Treasure; and if he were poor, he should not fail to continue in his Poverty. The very genuine interpretation of which words run thus, That our Commonwealth or Parliament shall have vast Expences, and exhaust the Kingdoms Treasure, almost to Beggery; that the vulgar sort of people, as the ordinary Farmer, and vulgar Mechanick, shall be extremely oppressed with heave and burdensome Payments, almost to their utter impoverishment; that they shall be continually affrighted, perpetually disquieted, enjoying very little of what is remaining behind, unspent: it prenotes their disquieted souls, and aptnesse to stir up their spirits against the Gentry, and their new Lords, called Committee-men.

We must yet have more wrangling, quarrelling, bloodshed, slaughter of our fellow-Subjects, &c. It is remarkable, and to be considered, that Jupiter is onely opposite to the tenth House, which represents in our Horizon the Majestie, Honour, Reputation and Fame of Kings, &c. It doeth also point out generally men in Command, Authority, either in War or in Peace, all manner of Magistrates, &c. I say, Jupiter is with the seven Stars, or neer them called Virgilie, of the signification of Mars and the Moon. What is the meaning of this? Marry, that a Generation of men lives among us, that, by their Factious Disagreement from more solid Judgements, are the onely Disturbers, at this time, of a hopefull and much-to-be-desired Peace: As also, that these kindes of men, these Sheep-skin'd Serpents, are fixed and resolved, with all their Wits and cunning Tricks, hypocriticall Fetches and Pretences, to prevent any Honour might accrue to His Majestie, or Reputation to our State and Common-wealth, unlesse their Turns may be served: But what they would have, I am ignorant, unlesse the Ruine of the Common-wealth, inevitably by some of them almost brought to Destruction. Let us observe, Jupiter is fixed, and in no Aspect with any Planet but the Moon; is Angular: as if no Society, Brotherhood or Fellowship, were equivalent to their own, or that he respected any body; or as if he, or his or their Opinion, were the Rule to regulate our Common-wealth by, and they the sole men capable of directing our Affairs, both Temporall and Spirituall. It is Jupiter his Conjunction with those tumultuous Stars, makes him bold, impudent and factious; it is his imbecility in the Signe, makes him not of so pure a capacity, as to judge between right and wrong. Reade Guido, fol. 565. Jupiter est Significator Nobilitium, & Judicum, Episcoporum, & Consulum, & Religiosorum, ac Civium, Sæcliarum. Jupiter is Significatour of Nobles, Judges, Bishops, Consuls, Religious, Citizens, and Sects or Schisms. So that for any thing I see, here may be some Nobles and Gentry, some Lawyers, Ministers and Bishops, guilty of the Crimes lately repeated. I cannot particular out the man, or men, or that Sect or Schism, which deeth and shall so much annoy us: For, Particularia prædicit nemo, nisi numine divino afflatus. No man predicts Particulars, but one endued with Prophecie, or some divine gift, gift, or deitie. But omitting these Separatists in Opinion, worthy to be distinguished in our State, you shall hear what the Position of Jupiter in the fourth doeth demonstrate: Augmentationem bonorum plurimum hominum ex reliquijs mortuorum, & ex hereditatibus atque prediis, vel ex thesauris absconditis vel inopinatis, & ex rebus uniuersis, & auferentur maiores ab hominibus, & venient eis res de quibus poterunt letari, & in pluribus gaudere, & auferentur eis cogitationes malae & tristitia, cessabunt etiam rixae atque omne horribile: Guido, 566. Many men shall augment their Estates by means of the Dead, or what is left them by the Deceased, by hidden and unexpected finding of Treasure: Mens Grievances shall be lessened, their Sorrows taken away, Wrangling shall surcease, and every grievous thing that offend. I pray God these words prove true, which in a time of Peace we should not need fear; but now they do no more then lull us asleep with Hopes of Peace. Let none think, but that I see this Production is contrary to what preceded. Doubtlesse we may be fair for some such thing; but, as I said, the weaknesse of Jupiter is such, he cannot perform the Work of which he is a Significatour, unlesse the Lord potentially assist in this Action. If some Vipers be detected before we are quite undone, much good may be hoped; for Venus doeth apply to a Tryne of Mars; and this gives cause to hope well, and for some comfortable Message, or good News, or such like things, to be directed to His Majestie, or from Him to us, presently, or not long after the Suns Ingresse into Aries; at what time, if some misfortune intervene not, or some mischief befall not a principall Officer, our Expectations may be greater, and the Effects of what is then in agitation much better; which I heartily wish: For, Saturnus si fuerit in Ariete, significat apparitionem rerum, de quibus mirati erunt homines in civitatibus atque regionibus seu terris quibus praefuerit Signum, & maxime in partibus Orientalibus, & erit hoc magis super divitibus & magnatibus, ac potentijs excedentibus communes magnates seu Nobiles, & fieri per homines sagaces, & in geniosos, & occultantes sua, & similia & silentes illa, & ostendentur signa, & prodigia miranda, & hoc sub specie pulchrae apparitionis, & hypocrisis. When Saturn is

is in Aries, in an Annuall Revolution, there shall happen in the Cities and Regions appertaining to the Signe he is in, such things as will caule Admiration; but principally in the Eastern Countreys: Rich men shall be most sensible of these things, and they such as exceed the common sort of Nobility and Gentry. These things shall come to passe by discreet and ingenicus men, obscuring their Intentions, and concealing their Matters. There shall be shewn some marvellous Prodigies or Sight in the Air. All what is acted, shall be colourably done, under fair Pretences, Apperances, and sinoothe Hypocrisie. He goeth on, and bios you see if Saturn be impedited yea or no: If so he be, and no fortunate Planet take away his malice, Significat mortem divinum & magnatum, & eorum invidiam ad invicem inter se atque accusaciones, & negligencias eorum, & odium popularium ad versus eos & eorum subditorum; significat etiam mortem causa aquarum, & impedimentum atque timorem & mortem in terra seu Regione que significatur per Signum in quo ipse tum fuerit, Guido Bonat. 550. Death threatned to the Gentry and Nobles: He points out their Hate, Rancours, and Malice each to other; their Accusing and Impeaching one another; their neglect and carelesseesse; much drowning and death ensuing; many Backslidings; much Terroure; Fear and Death in that Land signified by the Signe he is in at that time.

It cannot be denied, but that Capricorn is Ascendant for the Meridian of London, and that Saturn is Lord thereof now in his fall: We must also understand, that Mars disposeth of Saturn, and he is Lord of the tenth, in Opposition to Capricorn, and in the Signe wherein he falls: he in a particular manner in this Scheam, represents His Majestie of England; Jupiter Lord of the eleventh, His Assistants, Allies, Aiders, and Coadjutors in his Affairs. I see not, that either Mars or Sol, a Cofignificator also, do aspect the Cusp of the tenth, or Jupiter the Cusp of the eleventh, or Jupiter in any Aspect to Sol or Mars: I finde in the Opposition preceding, Mercury with Cauda, Saturn in the twelfth: Let us observe the Postventionall, Luna is Lady of the tenth, and Mercury in in Opposition to the eleventh in his fall ; Saturn out of the seventh , afflicting the Cusp of the tenth. In the Preventionall Opposition , Mars is within four degrees of the Ascendant ; Luna is Lady thereof , in application to a Tryne of Jupiter. In the yeers Revolution , Cauda is in the Ascendant ; Venus and Mercury virtually in the second. In the next Lunation , the 17 of Libra ascends ; Venus in exaltation , Mars, Sol , and Luna , all in Square. From hence will materially arise the Astrologicall Judgement of the most part of this year, with due consideration to the three other Cardinall-Ingresses , and some principall Configurations of the Superiours amongst themselves. Its ill to flatter , worse to dissemble ; but worst of all, willingly, or of set purpose, to vent lyes or untruths. If I erre, I seriously aver, Its with no prepared conceptions. I am resolved to stand close to the Rules of Art, without partiality to King or Parliament : For, however mine affection is wholly for Church-Reformation , and settling the Liberties of the Subject , and maintaining this present Parliament at Westminster to be the onely true one , and that Junio at Oxford an abortive and spurious ; yet am I no way averse to Monarchy , or my Sovereigns Prerogative, legally bounded : for in judgement of Government , I am totally Monarchicall, &c. This year, I cannot speak all Honey or Gall to His Majestie ; or to our Parliament at Westminster all Victory.

To proceed; here's a remarkable Observation, viz. That Mars is either Lord of the Ascendant, or tenth House, at the Sun his Ingresse into three of the Cardinall-Signes , and where he falls , Saturn is Lord of the tenth , and Cauda in the tenth to boot. Mars was the last yeer , either Lord of the Ascendant, or tenth, at the four Cardinall-Ingresses : We are yet sensible of the last yeers misery, and still groan with the sense thereof : I am sure I do : If guided by our precedent example, we may prognosticate the abounding troubles of this also.

The last yeer, I intimated Division, Distraction, Envie, Self conceit, private Heart-burnings, both at Court, and in our Common-wealth. I am doubtfull, that envious

Spirit, which last yeer almost undid us, is not yet conjured down into hell, or fled to the wildernesse.

What now shall I say? I will adde, Here's Treason, multiplication of rancour, malice, perjury, private ends, occult religious Malignants, hypocriticall, violent Saints, proved the States enemies, covetous devils, that would sell our Priviledges for Money, and his Majesties Honour for a Cypher. We formerly accounted the Puritan a seditious Fellow; compared to these now living, and continuing his Pristine Tenents, he may be a very Saint; these are Monsters: for, he was conscientious, this upstart Brood trayterously seditious: he stood, and yet stands for Monarchy, Laws, Order, Government; these, the supplanting and destruction of Monarchie, Laws, Common wealths. If the position of Saturn in the Preventionall Lunation, and Mars in the Postventionall, and Mercury with Venus at the Ingresse, fill not these mens Brains with Whimsies and Gingles, I had been silent. How greatly doth it concern the English Nation to desire Peace, if we allow of Haly, fol. 358: Si Sol & dominus anni fuerint malefici, & in malis locis, damnum & malum generale, Regi & Populo denotat: If Sol and the Lord of the yeer be impeded, and posited in ill places of heaven, it portends evil both to King and People, and a generall mischief to ensue. Mars is in his fall, and in the sixth; and the Sun is in Square with Mars: such things may be expected; for, Omnis Planeta existens in quadrato Solis, significat & adducit suas naturas & proprietates proprias: qui si fuerit Fortuna, significat Regno fortunam & bonum, victorias & gaudia; sed si fuerit Infortuna, significat gravitates & timores, occasiones, & res quæ assimilantur naturæ planete: Any Planet in Square of the Sun, signifieth and produceth his own natures and proper proprieties along with him: If this Planet be a Fortune, the whole Kingdom fares the better for it; but if contrary, fears, mistrusts, tribulations, and heavie sufferings, of the nature of that Infortune, afflict the Kingdom. The Sun is here afflicted by Mars, from hence Wars, Seditions, Sickneses, Devastations, Cruelties and Oppressions, are probably like to afflict the Kingdom of England. But how to apply the the succeeding words of Haly properly, I know not. Quando Revolutio anni est diurna, & Mars in Quadrato Solis, vel ejus Opposito, & in Signo mobili, significat quod insurget ejectus de Regno, qui auferet eum de Regno suo & potentia: When the Revolution of the year is diurnall, and Mars in Quadrature or Opposition to the Sun, and in a moveable Signe, one thrown out of his own Kingdom or Dominion, shall deprive another of his Kingdom and Command. Qui si fuerit in signo aqumatico, veniet ei damnum a parte Septentrionis: If Mars be in a watry signe, this dam-mage shall come from the North parts. How far these Aphorisms may extend, or be credited, I shewed in my last yeers Merline. Where Kings fail in number, put in and understand Earls, Nobles, Commanders: where they fail, take it thus: One Officer is put out in this Shire, and he thrusts out another in the next: one man supplants another, as well in Command as Office. All power in it self is a badge of Monarchie and Regality: and in this sense I am confident we shall have the words exactly made good: viz. Much chopping and changing of Officers out of one County into another. Quando dominus decima domus est Infortunatus, & in malo statu cadens, & in Aspectu Infertuniorum, denotat damnum & malum officialibus & praepositis Regis: & si Mars aspexerit Mercurium, significat quod auferentur eis Officia & quod eorum aliqui destruentur, Haly, 359. If the Lord of the tenth be unfortunate and cadent, it threatens many of the Kings servants shall lose their Offices; some shall be punished and much turmoiled amongst them. This Aphorism appertains not onely to the Court of His Majestie, but as much, and more, to our Parliament and their Sub-Officers and Committees; with and concerning whom, you shall see pretty sport, and finde many unsound and faithlesse Officers purged, scourged, cleansed, but scarce any amended. At si quando Mars fuerit infortunatus & maleficus, significat quod homines in obedientes contra Regem insurgent, & quod viles insurgent contra dominos, Haly, 360. If Mars be unfortunate and malignant, it signifies disobedient men shall make Insurrection against their King, and that ignoble and vulgar people shall make Insurretion against their Rulers or Lords. This may threaten some Insurrection against His Majestie, and His subordinate Officers, in some of those Counties He is possessed of; and some sensible failings in the like nature in some Counties now under protection of Parliament. I onely quote this, that His Majestie and our true Parliament, might have the deeper apprehension of the various and mutable Actions of this yeer, and so beget an earnest and longing desire in both Parties, and all those that adhere to either side, to an happy Union. I can promise absolute victory to neither side this whole yeer; for when we are, or shall be in a good posture, division, malice and envy, retards our expected successe: When His Majestie is fair for it, there's Colloquintida in His Officers Councils; And therefore I really beleeve

 there's some on both sides of the opinion, a principall Officer was of on His Majesties side, who confidently avowed, rather then the Wars should yet end, he would as willingly betray Oxford to the Parliament, as young Fines did bestow Bristol on His Majestie. It seems to me, that from the South and South-East quarter of Heaven, from London, and some Kingdoms or Countreys lying South-West, His Majestie may have ayd and support, both of Treasure, Ammunition and Men; which although its not so fully intimated in the Vernall Scheam, yet at the Suns Ingresse into Cancer, which is in June, its most apparant; for then you finde Luna in Taurus in the eleventh, Jupiter and Venus in Gemini, an evident demonstration in our Art, as the times now stand, that about these times, Men, Ammunition or Money are come or coming, or hastily preparing: Certainly, I judge them Forraigners, or of another Nation, because both Jupiter and Venus are Peregrine in those degrees of the Signe where they are in: Yet let me tell you, there's Saturn in the tenth, and Mercury disposer of Jupiter and Venus Retrograd, in the twelfth, and Luna neer
 the Pleiades: An unkinde salute by the way, and no pleasing entertainment at Land, may attend these forces, if any such shall casually adventure amongst us: Kentishmen are no fools, nor the English quite degenerated from

from the worth of their Ancestors. But some would adventure a judgement, and that not improper, that His Majestie may finde comfort from the East, northerly. &c. Be it as It may be; few men shall gain in the end. Shall His Majestie have such plentiful assistance, and shall our true Parliament finde none? What? Have not we Venus in Pisces, and Sol in the second, and Luna in Tryne to Jupiter? Our omitting opportunities, our many miscarriages, our divisions without period or hope of conclusion, our intestine broyls innumerable, shall notwithstanding not undo us; we shall float above water: nor shall we be conquered as yet, by Arms; but lost, without Gods mercies, by Distractions: For Cauda fixed in the Ascendant, tells me, A wilfull and obstinate party, commanding in high places, will more prejudice us then our Enemies; and yet we shall not fail of having good store. When the Lord of the Ascendant beholds the Ascendant with Quadrature, in a private question it signifies the ill managing of his private affairs; Mutato nomine: It holds good in our Common-wealth at this time. Quicquid desiderant Reges, plebuntur Achivi. The fathers have eaten sowre Grapes, and the children smart for it: By which our unhappie disagreement, we may expect that sentence of Bonar. fol. 562. Saturnus in secunda conturbationem amicorum in illo anno significat, & perdent homines, & diminuent debonit suis: Saturn in the second, we trouble our selves, and bring sorrow to our Friends; men lose in their Courses, and diminish their Fortunes. Nor shall Oxford have cause to rejoyce, if Capricorn be the Ascendant of that City, as George Wharton tells: Si fuerit Capricornus Ascendens, & fuerit impeditus Saturnus, tunc impeditur terra Capricorni ex frigore, siccitate & sterilitate, & ex dolore genitum & junctuarum, & capitis & pedum, nisi contra operatur Luna, Guido, 543. Capricorn is the Ascendant of Oxford, we are informed, and Saturn by his fall is sufficiently impedit, by reason of ill Weather, Barrenesse, Siccity of the ground, and other Inconveniencies; misery and sickness is determined for her, lameness in the knees and joynts, diseases of the head and feet, shall betide them; unlesse the Moon operate and assist. If any validity be in Astrologie, the West of England, and the North-west part of that tract of Land, shall be fearfully harrowed, wasted and consumed; and at some time of the year the North-east part will be in jeopardy.

Si fuerit Mars in Revolutione anni in Cancro, significat naufragia repente venientia ex forti atque subito flatu ventorum, & significat rixam, atque Contentionem & Bellum in partibus Occidentis, & gravabuntur homines causa redditus tributorum, & erunt febres & alie aggritudines, & erunt dolores gutturis & pectoris, & gravabitur calor & minuetur pluvia: If Mars in the years Revolution be in Cancer, he portends sudden and unexpected Shipwracks, by reason of strong gusts of winde, Controversies, Quarrelling, War in the Western parts: men shall be grieved in regard of heavy Taxes, many Feavers, and much Sicknesse, Diseases in the Throat and Brest: Heat shall more abound then Rain. Albumazar goes on, Erit annus periculosus erit modicum ungucum atque buirum seu pinguedo, significat etiam mortem quadrupedum, sed aquorum magis; & si fuerit ejus latitudo Septentrionalis, significat gravitatem frigoris intempore suo, & paucitatem aquarum fontium; & si fuerit Occidentalis, significat curam atque sollicitudinem vulgi, seu rusticorum, & popularium circa propria negotia, Guido, 574. It shall be a dangerous year; there is but little Oil, or Butter, or Fatnesse; it signifies the death of fourfooted Beasts, but Horses especially: if his Latitude be Septentrional, much unseasonable cold follows in its proper time, the Fountains more dry then usually; and if Mars be Occidental, he is the forerunner of care and thought to the poor Countrey-man, and signifies what pains they take in their private affairs, &c. Which Aphorism, applied rationally, not onely with the Lunar Eclipse, 31 January, the Ingresse into Capricorn, 1644. the Vernall and Autumnall Ingresses 1645. may pemonstratively designe the west of England for the most principall Seat of Wars this year. The Eclipse points out the South part, tending to the East part of that part of England. Some happinesse it will be, that some Shires and Coasts of England may be clear; for si infortuna aspexerit ascendens alio loco & non de Angulo, non erit damnum generale, nisi lumen eorum sit combustum cum lumine domini Medii Cœli, Haly, 361. If in a Revolution an Infortune beheld the Ascendant, and not out of an Angle, the Calamity then raging shall not be generall, unlesse their light be combust with the light of the Lord of Mid-heaven, &c. Which last saying, contradicts not what formerly preceded: for although every County of England shall smart in their Payments, Taxes, &c. of the generall infelicity now depending among us; yet do I speak confidently, that some Counties and Shires shall not have an enemy Souldier in their Confines, which is a blessing hardly to be paralleld; and so Makes not a generall evil run generally thorough every vein of the Kingdom. I forbear mentioning the particular Countreys of this Kingdom, which in my conception shall not undergo the hard fate of many others: The names, I say, I conceal, lest thereby I might unluckily invite the unlicensed and extravagant Plunderer for pillage, into those quarters he dreamed not of: For we shall finde it most true, that Guido, fol. 510. relateth of the existency of the Moon in the 12. Nocumtione eveniet populo causa inimicorum occultorum, seu majorum animalium: The people shall receive hurt by sculking enemies, and losse of their greater beasts. Luna tandem in 12. significat quod populus multos inimicos habebit, Haly, 378. The Moon in the 12. denounceth many enemies to the vulgar; which I verily believe shall be true: and yet at the Sun his Ingresse, she hastens to a Sextile of Venus and Mercury; but instantly she comes to the terrible Opposition of Mars. Some seeming likelihood of Treaties, words or hopes of such a thing, a buzzing in the ears of the people of Peace; but the miserable success which immediately follows, will make it appear, sometimes two faces are under one hood. It is the will of a few, that we still fight; it is the desire of thousands, we fight no more. Without doubt, the hand of God not preventing the course of the Stars, and their signification, there doth appear to me fierce and bloody action in the Vernal quarter of the yeer. Vide quis ex Planetis aspicitur Solem hora Revolutionis, & si aspexeris cum Mars, et fuerit ei corporalius junctus, significat intersectionem Regis vel Principis,

Principis, quæ occurrer ei suafione vulgi, seu popularium a latro-nibus diurnis, & homicidis, & obfcifforibus viarum qui occidunt homines precio, Guido, 612. See what Planet beholds the Sun in the Revolution of the year; if Mars have any Aspect, or be in Conjunction with him, it is a signification of the interfection of a King or prime man, occasioned by the request or perswasion of the Commonalty or popular tumults, and from highway-thieves, murderers, or men-killers, infesting the high ways, and cutting throats for their hire, or a sum of money. You must understand, in these Arabick sentences, he as well means, some Magistrates, Earls, Nobles, principall Officers in any kinde, Captains, Colonels, Camp-Officers, may casually come to their end by common Plunderers, and highway-setters, Troopers, or the like; or by some Am-buscado purposely laid to entrap such men, which may,
without a fallacie in Art, assuredly happen this year.
And for that Sol is generally a Significator of Kings, it is here mentioned according to the letter, without its limitation: for, as I said the last year, these Arabians had eight or ten Kings, or more, in every Kingdom, and were perpetually in Arms one against another; and they had as many great Officers, whom they reputed as Princes, or petty Kings, &c.

Our English great ones are desired to be carefull of themselves this year; for the Royall Signe Leo, of the Regall Triplicity, is twice afflicted this present year:
first, by an Eclipse of the Moon, the last of January;
next, by an Eclipse of the Sun in August: Aries, the first Signe of the Trygon, is afflicted most part of the year, by the tossing and tumbling of Saturn thorow it: And let us not forget, the Sun and Moon were in the 2 degree of Sagittarius, which is the third Signe of that Trygon, the 19 of November, 1644. When the Parelii, or two mock-Suns appeared, one on the one side of the Sun, and the other on the other; or more plainly, one on the East side, the other Southward: Of these I doubt not but some will give a learned account to the world, whose hap it was to see them. Quicumq; in fortunam re ferunt, in-grati Deo videntur, quod cum Cælestia tanto ordine tam perenni gubernari

gubernari cernant, hac casui tribuere velint Those are unthankfull to God, who refer these Prodigious to Fortune, or such like accidents : or, when as they see the heavenly bodies governed by so constant an Order, will attribute these to Chances. Three hundred and sixteen days from the time of these Apparances, shall not passe, untill we discover what this prodigious Portent may signifie. A heauey Judgement, great and fearfull, is preparing for a prime Family of Europe, before the number of seven hundred and seventy one days, to be accounted from the beginning of December, 1644. be accomplished. January, 1647. may be a fatall moneth. But this extravagant Learning is a piece of Egyptian Caball, extracted out of the more secret Learning of Astrologie : For delivery hereof, it may hap I may be call'd, A member of the Star-fed Tribe of Caldeans, by a lying scribling Mercury, &c.

Mortem primi in primo : Death of the first in the first.

Secundi in secundo : Of the second in the second.

Pugnam prope K & S : A Battel neer K and S.

Latrocinia undiq : Thievery every where.

In truth it is the forerunner of some Accidents not at all emergent from an annuall Revolution, or this Discourse now in reading : Mine Astrologically Opinion, grounded upon the solid foundations of Art, together with my Mathematicall Judgement upon a most eminent Eclipse next August, I intend to publish very shortly : which Eclipse is neither the least, or of least concernment to the English Common-wealth, whether herein we intend His now-Majestie of England, or the legall and sole Parliament of England now sitting at Westminster, and likely long to sit.

The Kingdom which in this present yeer, 1645. are passive, are in effect principally those nominated in the Lunar

Lunar Eclipse. And yet methinks Scotland should not be altogether void of Invasion, domestick broyls, &c. What may befall the Regall Austrian Family, I omit: Can it be without neighbourly Incursions, Invasion, Dissension? &c. The Kingdoms likely to suffer, are more particularly such as are subject to the four Cardinall-Signes, viz. Aries, Libra, Cancer, Capricornus; which if any man desire to be satisfied in, he may peruse Master Bookers Almanack for 1644. But yet methinks France should not brag, or Germany boast of much felicity this year.

If Venice, that Noble State, both politike and wise, be not engaged, or distressed, mine Astrologie must fail: Nay, I must acquaint Italy, Rods are laid in Pisse for that People: What people? say some. Rome, Rome, there's distraction, there's sedition, there's a plot ready to break out, almost to the confusion of that Principallity.

Shall Ragorzi the gallant Transilvanian have all the World at his command? No: The Fates have appointed him a Prince, no King.

Shall the Swede always thrive? He is a Protestant, else I would tell him a tale in his ear, &c.

Denmark looks for Peace, would purchase it at any condition. He must not be quiet, nor shall he assist against England.

We have little to do with petty Families; and yet some doubt a man lesse then a King, may more puzzle us then all the World besides.

Were we as wise as the Dutch, or as constant to our selves as the Scots, we might be more glorious abroad, and respected at home, and pretty terrible to Europe.

Shall Ireland passe without the black Character of Envie, Scorn and Reproach, that in cold blood hath devoured above eighty thousand Protestants, English and Scottish? Her doom draws neer: nor shall Spain, now ready to totter, or Italy, neer a combustion, be able to support her in these her unnatural Murders.

I let the fate of other Nations passe. Caput draconis is in Leone, significat multitudinem fulminum. & apparitionem ignium in aere, sub iuris multis; aquarum atque intersectionem,

Guido

Guido, fol. 579. Many floods are hereby signified, many fiery Apparitions in the Air, much injury, wrockednesse, and slaughter. The Elements have of late afforded many strange sights; yet we beleeeve nothing, nor can be made sensible: Jerusalem had the like apparitions some yeers before its desolation. The greatest comfort I do finde (and its but a little) the reception betwixt Jupiter and the Moon, and her being in Tryne to Saturn; by which I gather, or would at least have it so, That necessity at length will inforce a stricter Unity and sementing together against the publike enemy: I do not dislike that Saturn is with Lucida Eridani of the nature of Jupiter, and Venus: It also pleaseth me well, that Jupiter and Venus receive each other: We may adde to our former achievements by this Unity, notwithstanding the many private advices that go to the Enemy. Mercury in Conjunction with Venus, gives hint of some witty Spies amongst us, some Wolves, and more Vipers, and yet our eyes are not opened. Times, Men, and Seasons, neglected, plunged us in the West, and have fixedly prolonged our Wars, not yet to determine by any naturall foresight I have. But let us further observe the posture of the Moon in the twelfth: Duritiarum & instabilitatem rerum, & rixam & carceres ex parte inimicorum, Haly 350. Here's foreseen the instability of humane Affairs, Hard-heartednesse, Quarrelling, Imprisonments from the side of our Enemies: I do not approve the position of Mars in the sixth House; for usually he prenotes many infirmities proceeding from Blood corrupted, Feavers, the Small Pocks, abundance of Choler in men, more then formerly: As he now stands posited, he extremely threatens all lesser Cattle, as Sheep, Hogs, Conies, Dear, &c. Disobedience, and Insurrections of Servants against their Masters, &c. But because this onely Scheam of Sol his Ingresse into Aries, doth not sufficiently regulate the Affairs of this year, without consideration had to the other three Ingresses into Cardinall Signes, and the Solar Eclipse intervening; I shall touch somewhat of the Sun his Ingresse into Cancer, June the tenth, and leave the remainder of the *Sun*s entrance into Libra, &c. to come

come forth with my judgement of the three Suns, and the Solar Eclipse, &c. In this Summer quarter I finde the Ascendant fixed, and Saturn in the tenth in Partill square to it; our enemies increafe, and now maliciously seek our ruine; I think we shall hold our own with much struggling, I assure you. The Moon is in square to Mars. The God of Battels protect our Generals, defend our Garrison-Towns, and protect the South and East parts of this Kingdom: I hope not onely they, but some other principall parties, will have care of themselves: Here's probability of stiff action, and some horrid conspiracy, murther or mischief at hand, intended against us.

Some new Faction, tumult, uproar, mens hearts oppressed formerly with infinite injuries by incroaching Officers, will now make it appear, they will not be alwayes made slaves. What, shall our purses have no bottomes? Thus it is when justice is prolonged, the vertuous abused and slighted, and the undeserving exalted.

You finde Saturn in the tenth House, Merorem ac tristitiam & distractiones & gravitates ex parte Regis, seu potestates, & perplexitates carceris, Guido 363. Et si fuerit Mars dominus decime domus peribit culpa sua: In effect they tell us, A King, a Prince, a great Commander, or many Commanders, about these times, shall be in great perplexity, fearfull of surprizall. What follows if Mars be Lord of the tenth, as here he is? Such persons shall perish by their own folly and wilfulnesse. Much about these times, it will be evident what support of Forraign Assistance shall come against us. This I am confident of, either Men, Money, or Ammunition, will plentifully arrive about the West Coasts of this Kingdom. I freely confesse, I am not terrified at any thing I finde against our Parliament, but our intestine disagreements; of which, I have after some time, a smattering of comfort, that they will be in Unity. Let him or them, be accursed with Bell, Book and Candle, that shall indeavour to disjoynt us and the Scottish Nation: Our happinesse consists in Unity, our slavery folle if we separate, I am willing ling to conclude at this time ; for ere August approach, I have other matters to publish ; and ere then, here will be some eminent alteration amongst us, and some Eastern Countreys ; and hard it will be, to keep two of our worst enemies from falling together by the ears for Ceremonies : And although a Changling at Oxford seem ignorantly to contradict it, yet have we in full force, according to the manner of its operation, the effects of the Solar Eclipse in August last, and Opposition of Sa- turn and Mars, and Jupiter and Mars, 1644.

THE
Errours of Master Whartons
 Prognostication, 1645.

Refelled, Refuted, and Retorted,

By WILLIAM LILLY.

A S no Oratour can please all Auditors, no Artist all Humorists; so Would it have been great Folly, nay, meer Madnesse in me, to have expected a generall Acceptance and Applause of my Labours, committing my Book to the Presse, and myself, and it thereby, to the censurè of the World, in these times especially, and upon this Subject: The one free for, and full of nought but rancour and abuse; the other, a Subject, so rarely understood, as scarcely one of ten thousands have attained unto it; and even of those Master George Wharton, the least and meanest. But as Dogs bark at the Moon, and Fools carp at Wisdom; though the one be admired, the other honoured by Wisemen: So I need not Wonder much to hear Ignorance rail at Art, Nemo enim arti inimicus nisi ignorans. And that M. G. W. may have some Grounds or Reasons to suspect his own knowledge, and himself and all men sufficient sufficient to smile at his Folly; in snarling at those things, the Introduction whereof he is not as yet perfectly arrived unto, and by consequence less able to confute higher points; I will in tracing the Prognosticon of his Almanack, Printed at Oxford for the year 1645. unmask his Mistakes, and present his Errors in point of Art, to the view of himself, and all men; Humbly desiring all judicious and indifferent Readers to judge betwixt him and me.

THE first thing that presents it self, is the Winter-Quarter, and in it, the Reduction of his Ephemeris (viz. Origani, whom I perceive he exactly followeth) to the Meridian of Oxford; for which place, he maketh the apparant time of the Suns entrance into Capricorn, two hours twenty three minutes, post mediam noctem. I am sufficiently sensible he hath done the same rightly by the said Tables: yet notwithstanding, Master G.W. divulging himself in Print, an Artist and Student in this Science, ought not to have suffered, either the Errour of the Presse, or the Authors Mistake (who lived far remote from us, and therefore could not come to the exact knowledge of such things, so well as we our selves) to be the infallible Basis for him to work upon: For first, by the same Tables, let him see what the difference of time betwixt London and Frankfort upon Oder is, and he shall finde one hour seven minutes (which difference of time is Consentaneous unto other Tables, and experience; and therefore not to be esteemed erroneous.) Next, let him consider the situation (viz. in Longitude and Latitude) of Oxford from London, which he may finde it by the latest Observators, to lie sixteen minutes more Northerly then London, viz. in 51.46. Then let him but take the ordinary distance betwixt London and it, as it is generally reckoned by all Travellers, viz. Forty seven miles, (which is the greatest way of advantage Master Wharton can reckon) and according to all manner of Operations, the Product will amount but to 44 min. which

To here, Master George Wharmen, you may now see the face of Heaven altered, which consequently must needs cause variation of your judgement, (if you have any) whether for better or worse, it matters not; for here

you

you may see, according to your own (though peculiar) manner of reckoning.

Saturn onely Cadent in the sixth.

Jupiter and Venus in Angles.

Sol and Mercury in the second. And

Mars in the eighth.

Of the Effects of this Posture, you may frame your own judgement at leasure But touching your at present-delivered judgement of Mars his being in Gemini, and in the ninth, and in perfect Tryne to the Horoscope, to portend good successe to those engaged for the defence of their Sovereign, their Religion, and Laws, (speaking in the Oxonian Dialect) Gemini being the City of Londons Signe, as you say, and Mars looking sickly out of it. Might I not here, with a Sciant presentes & futuri, burst out, as did once Hannibal, hearing Phorimo read unto him, who was Master in the Art Military, a Lecture of War: I have known many fools, none greater then----- For shame, Master Wharton, recollect your self, and give not the World occasion hereafter to contemn your judgement. If the 24 Libra ascend, which is the representative Body of the City-Forces at that time, and Mars behold the same with Trine sinister; doeth he not thereby preserve the main Body of their Armies, by the care, industry, and vigilancy of their Commanders? I will not perswade Master Booker to be troubled with such innocent Astrologie; for a more absurd and irrationall Application, I never yet either read or heard of. Surely Don Quixotte was better vers'd in Kinght-Errantry, then you in Astrologie.

The second is the Spring Quarter, the Basis whereof is as faulty as was the former, the apparent time of the *Sun*s ingresse into Aries: for the Meridian of Oxford being 15 hour, 3 min. 40 sec. post Meridiem, the ninth of March; and the Ascendent 11 ho. 37 min. of Capricorn, which differeth from Master Whartons, 29 min. 40 sec. of time, and 7 degr. 27 min. in the Ascendant; and so proportionably in all the rest. A defective Foundation, A tottering nottering Edifice. But of this sufficiently in the last.

Next, Jupiter, in Master Whartons own Saheam, is by himself made to be locally and effectually in the fourth house, and from thence pronounceth he his judgement, viz. Augmentationem bonorum plurium hominum ex reliquiis mortuorum, & ex hereditatibus, atque pradiis, vel ex thesauris absconditis, vel inopinatis, & ex rebus antiquis, &c. Guido Bonat. par. 4. cap. 81. Jupiter in the fourth, signifieth encrease of Goods or Estate to many men, by the relicts of the deceased, or by Inheritance, or by Farms and Possessions, or by hidden Treasures, or by things unlooked for, and ancient, &c. Yet methinks, that that little smattering which he hath in Astrologie, cannot but speak the man more knowing, then thus positively to deliver his judgement upon Jupiter in the fourth: Surely it was but some mistake in him; for all children in Astrologie know, and Origanus (Master Whartons own Author) fol. 610. Leovitius de genituris, fol. 30. Ranquinius, fol. 33. and divers others, do command us to allow five degrees preceding, and five degrees subsequent, for the Cusp of each house. I will have more modestie, civility and charity, then to think it was his own private fancy, or his impudent senselesse ignorance: but if it were, he shall be Lord Paramount of ignorance and absurdity: for Jupiter being but twenty eight minutes from the Cusp of the fifth; cannot but be reckoned to be in the fifth; from whence judgement is to be declared, which Master George Wharson will confesse must greatly differ from his former: for, following his own method, and Bonatus his following words, Jupiter in quinta, significat incrementum filiorum, & bonum esse eorum. Et quod non erunt abortus in anno illo nisi forte aliqui casuales, &c. Vide Bonati, locum supradictum. Jupiter in the fifth, signifieth increase of children, and their prosperous health or well-being; and that there will not be many abortive births that yeer, unlesse some by accident.

I formerly conceived Master George Wharson his Construction of Jupiter in the fourth, had proceeded from some mistake: but finding him plunged into the same error in deriving the effects of Mars from his position in the sixth, and by consequence giving judgement upon a wrong Basis, I do not well know what to think of him: yet in civillity, I passe by the giving him any misbecoming or scurrilous Language. Mars wanting there but two degrees four minutes of the Cusp of the seventh, whose signification therefore (as I before made good of Jupiter) ought to be taken from thence; and then his effects, according to Master Whartons own Author, honest Bonar. par. 4. cap. 25. will be, Contentiones, & contrarietates, & conturbationes in omnibus rebus, & damnum illa de causa, & significat mercesiones cum fraude, atque deceptiones, marorem quoque atque iustitiam in illud.

The next Observation Master George Wharton makes, is of Venus in the second, and quoteth Haly for her signification, which I wish might prove true; but he deeming that too good a Prediction for us, urgeth a sentence altogether idle and senselesse to this purpose, out of Guido Bonatus, and corrupteth the Authors sense, by not rehearsing the whole, which at length is, Si fuerit Venus in Pisces, significat diminutionem nivium ac pluviarum, & mortalitates partibus meridianis, which perhaps Master G. W. will have to be London: But what follows? Et captionem piscium, & salvabuntur regna earum partium, & divites, & nobiles, & magnates, & salvabitur avaritia quod non patietur grave detrimentum. Now, M. George Wharton, and all indifferent Readers, what think you? was not this sentence excellently well cited to prove mortality in the South?

From Venus, he descends to Mercury, and recommends in that behalf, that place of Guido, par. 4. cap. 101. but still obscuring the honest Authors meaning, by curtalling his sentences, and leaving out these words: Et bonum statum, & bonum esse inter homines tam nato quam aliis. But if Master Wharton had viewed Bonatus upon Mercury in Pisces, fol. 584. whose words are, Si fuerit Mercurius in Piscibus, dixit Albumasar, erit mors in partibus Animarum, an Arabick word; but signifieth, as modern Linguists tell us, the North-west; it might have put him upon some other manner of judgement; which he may learn against the next year.

Lastly, he comments upon Luna in the twelfth, and tells tells us out of Guido, Significant impedimentum & duriciam & instabilitatem, rerum & rixam ac carceres & parte inimicorum, par. 4. c. 103. As if he would intimate to us, out of these words, the Parliaments ruine, which I can no way apprehend or conceive; yet I affirm, there is truth in Astrologie. But let him hearken what Haly, par. 8. cap. 12. saith of Luna in the twelfth, and he tells us, that Populus in illo climas, multos habebunt inimicos; and if this prove not true, that the people will have many enemies, I am no Prophet: for what concerns his absurd and scurrilous Language; an argument rather of ignorance, then knowledge: or, at the least, of great incivility. I passe it by, as not once worthy to be taken notice of, either for it, or for himself.

Were the publike Differences 'twixt his sacred Majesty, and this his honourable Parliament at Westminster, as easily to be reconciled; as the two Meridians of London and Oxford: according to Master George Whartons calculation; this Kingdom might well and happily employ our Author in that grand action (and then by proportion, we might expect an end of our distractions the next June, for the difference of our apparent time 'twixt London and Oxford, at the Suns entrance into Capricorn the tenth of December, was fourty one minutes at the Suns Ingresse in Aries in March, thirty minutes fere, which bred seven degrees thirty seven minutes difference in the Ascendant: But in this Summer-quarter, at the Suns entrance into Cancer in June, Master George Wharton seems to reconcile the two places, by allowing Oxford the same Ascendant that we do London, viz.  $\text{N } 20$ . But how this will agree with the true Rules of Art, let us examine.

Having

Having now proved his Gold to be but Droffe, his  $\Omega$  2. o. to be  $\Omega$  7. 48. I come to his Quotations of Guido: but finding them urged to no purpose, I'll onely recommend unto Master George Wharton, and all men, Guido, fol. 362. the three last lines, concerning Saturn in the tenth house: for modesties sake, I forbear to rehearse the words, because they have particular relation to His Majestie, as our Author will have it: but God send him better luck then Saturn in the tenth portends.

Lastly, our Author delivering Guido's judgement upon Venus in Gemini, must needs, for more amplification and confirmation, adde his own; but how learnedly, no Artift shall have sooner read, then be able to censure. His words are these; Which is further confirmed, by reason she is separating from a Sextile of Mars, and in the same Aspect with Caput Draconis. O the profound Master Rhombus! Risum teneatis amici? Was it ever either heard or read, that the Dragons head hath any Rays or Beams, or can be in any Aspect with a Planet? We must all to the School again. Can our Author but produce an Author, an Author, yea, though an Utopian, for this his high and mighty Astrologie?

I am now arrived to Master George Whartons last Quarter, Autumn; the errors whereof, are such as have been corrected in the former Quarters, viz. The Reduction of his Ephemeris to the Meridian of Oxford. His giving judgement upon Saturn in the eleventh, being a wrong Basis: the effects whereof having been sufficiently before declared, I need not to insist upon the Confutation of them here.

Wherefore, having plainly performed what I promised, and unveiled such errors, which if an Artis alumnus, a meer nursing in the Science, should commit, were in him even worthy of reproof: How much more then in our Author, a profest Artift, yea, and in Print, though to the scandall of Astrologie?

Wherefore, I say, most courteous and judicious Reader, after you have seriously perused this Modicum, and in it, Master George Whartons erroneous reducing Origani

Origani Ephemeris to the Meridian of Oxford, by that means laying for himself a wrong foundation.

His deriving his judgement from an indirect Basis.

His misapplication of the Texts of Guilo and Haly, and corrupting their genuine sense, by leaving out part of their sentences.

His own weaknesse of judgement, delivered but once in the whole Almanack (viz. of Venus in Sextile with the Dragons head, and that so ridiculouy erroneous) be pleased to judge betwixt him and me, and whether he may not most justly be said to be imperfect, even in his Introductions, and consequently, lesse fit to confute higher Points: yet notwithstanding, to give satisfaction to the world, I will proceed to vindicate my Discourse of the supernaturall Apparitions; a subject as far beyond the capacity of this little Astrologer, as the Utopian Language mine; being sorry I have not an Army of such Champions against me, rather then one: for, take away Impudent, Senselesse, Rebell, and the like absurdities, and the Dispute is ended; ill words being his best, and most approved Weapons.

WILLIAM LILLY his Reply
TO

Master WHARTONS Objections
against supernaturall-Sights, &c.
Published at Oxford, 1644.

Wharton.

But here I cannot omit the impudent and senseless Discourse of William Lilly, in a Pamphlet of his, styled, Supernaturall-Sights and Apparitions, &c. licensed by that licentious Libeller, John Booker, concerning the Eclipse of the Sun which happened the 22 of August, 1644. Which Eclipse, notwithstanding the same was not visible in Great Britain, he saith, premonstrateth wonderfull things to England; the Captivity of some King or Prince, &c.

Lilly. Master Wharton, your unguided zeal to the Prerogative, without any cause given, hath begot your ill opinion of me; and I perceive you are now angry: Certainly, so much as there is of passion in your words, so much there is of Nothing to the purpose in your lines. Let us not infringe the laws of Charity in our Disputes, but answer peaceably, soberly, and with convenient Language. Your styling Master Booker, Libeller, hath nothing of the matter in question, nor doth it adde one atome to the Cause you seem to undertake. You are yet in your A, B, C: when you have learned your Accidence, you may be able to prate, but not correct Master Booker, or my self. The Pamphlet you mention, I wrote; nor am ashamed of it: But you injure me, by depraving my my sense, in your repetition of the words which, fol. 12. run thus : Verily, I may pronounce some wonderfull things to happen to England and some other Regions, by the harmony of this Conjunction with the Eclipse. I handled the Conjunction of Jupiter and Mars : but finding the Signe and Degree of the Conjunction, to be the Signe and very Degree culminating in this Eclipse, I gave the precedent judgement, (now adjudged senselesse) but made not the Eclipse it self the forerunner of so great mutations ; but put in the Eclipse as a Coadjutrix, in helping forward the actions depending on that Conjunction of Jupiter and Mars : and in this I have not erred, as the learned in Art well know, though you do not.

And whereas you charge me that I say, This Eclipse doth premonstrate the Captivity of some King or Prince, &c. and there go no further, you wrong your self and the Reader ; for my own words, fol. 13. lin. 25. are verbatim : My private fancy or judgement is, because Mercury is Lord of the Ascendent, and partly of the tenth House, and he is combust and afflicted by the Sun, Lord of the twelfth House ; It doth premonstrate the Captivity of some King, Prince or Commander or Commanders in chief of Armies, Cities, Towns and Castles, or of some eminent person or persons. These are my words, which are true.

Wharton. And he further tells us, That the day of the Eclipse should no sooner come, but the effects of it should immediately follow.

Lilly. My words in full length are : The day of the Eclipse should no sooner come, but the effects of this Eclipse shall immediately shew themselves, because its in the Ascendant, and in Conjunction of the nimble Mercury, who is exceeding swift in his motion, and will enforce the actions depending on this Eclipse and Conjunction to operate, like a furious whirlwinde. See Card. 7 Segm. 76 Aphor. whose words are ; His igitur statim mutatio fit quibus in Orientis est linea maximus autem vigor quibus in Caeli corde.

I predicted, according to the doctrine of Ptolomey, quick action to ensue immediately after the Eclipse. And in the third week in August, did not Prince Rupert very nimbly flee from Chester with fourty Horse, leaving five hundred hundred for our friends to seize on, which they did. This was nothing, good Master Wharton: but had not the gallant and valiant Colonell Milton been crossed, and your friend Prince Rupert rode hard, he might have verified my Prediction. (Perhaps you framed your Tables of direction from one Town to another, for his Graces levity.) Neither is it unknown what industry His Majesties Forces used in the West, and how quick and nimble motion there was to entrap his Excellencies person, and how neer he also was to Captivity, his whole Army being, presently after this Eclipse, almost captived by his Majestie. I mention not the actions of the other parts of the Kingdom, which doubtlesse were quick enough. And had you been a lover of Astrologie, you would have passed by my Failings, if any had been: for shew me, if you can, any Astrologieall Tract ever wrote, that hath more adorned Astrologie, then Anglicum, and the Supernaturall Apparitions.

Wharton. Now the 22 of August, 1644. is past: I would fain have him to shew me what King or Prince hath been taken captive. You see that Kings and Princes must still be the subject of these Rebels corrupt and wicked language.

Lilly. The 22 of August I confesse is past; nor did I designe either day or moneth, nor is there any King or Prince since captived: But my good friend, Master G.W. our friends the Noble Scots have taken four Lords, and the Governour of Newcastle, prisoners. (But you will perhaps say, To be prisoners, is not to be captived.) October the 27. the Earl of Cleveland, a prime Commander, was captived at Newbury (perhaps he wanted your Almanack, to teach him the way to Oxford: as many as could get it, I am sure made use of it, and their heels.) That much to be honoured Sir John Meldrum, had all your Commanders of Liverpool bound, and delivered to him, the 1 of November; they were all truly captived. And, had our Souldiers had day light at Newbury perhaps we had captived some body. I conceive these examples onely have confirmed my Prediction, which was not confined to any day or moneth: for you are very simple in Astrologie, so think, that what ever might be expected from the Con-

Conjunction of Jupiter and Mars, and the mutuall correspondency betwixt the Conjunction and Eclipse, should operate presently : for Origanus, fol. 465. might have satisfied you; who saith, Si Eclipsis inciderit in orientalem finitorem, significat eventuum exordia circa proximos quatuor menses qui sequuntur deliquium. The duration also of the Eclipse was three hours, which in a Solar Eclipse tells us, The effects should continue three yeers: but because I used the Eclipse as an handmaid to the Conjunction, I medled not with any such measure of time : so that if any King or Prince be taken prisoner during these three yeers, I had not erred. And your charging me to intend His Majestie, and calling me Rebel, are equally false, and need no Confutation, but the words in my own Book. And you know, or should know at least, that persons signified by the tenth house, are Kings, Princes, Lords, Commanders, &c. I am totally Monarchicall : and if His Majestie had perused my Supernaturalls, Fol. 15 and 16. he might have found me a truer Prophet then honest George Wharton.

Wharton. But I desire the judicious Reader will be pleased to peruse Cardane upon Ptolomey, lib. 2. cap. 5. and Campanella, lib. 2. art. 2. and he shall understand, that Eclipses are not hurtfull at all to those Regions or Cities wherein they are not seen.

Lilly. This had been indifferently well urged, had I positively maintained the Eclipse, without the consent of the Conjunction, to have designed such matters : but you may read all along, my Connexion of the one with the other. You have aptly produced Cardane and Campanella, who both are of your opinion in that place, and prove that which I never denied them. Yet what will you say, if I produce even Ptolomey himself, to speak that they work something, if under the earth, or words to that purpose. Read Ptol. lib. 2. cap. 21. translated by Leo Allacius, printed at Leyden, 1635. Ad partes vero cum ipso signo in quo defectus fuit, consentientes, nec non ad eas in quibus defectus praedictus dum fuit supra terram visus est eventus potissimum pertinebit. Here you see, that the most materiall effects are assigned to that Eclipse which is above the earth;

earth ; but the word potissimum admits of some events ; when its Subterranean : nor did I say more , but conceive I might have satisfied any modest man with the very words in my Book ; for do not I say , The effects work more violently, if the Eclipse be above the earth ; more obscurely, if under.

Haly Rodoan, in tract. 2. cap. 5. Inspicimus ibi ubi est Eclipse super terram, & dicemus quod accidens Majus, & fortius erit ibi: So that he onely concurs, that the visibility of the Eclipse makes the accident more strong ; yet denieth nor, but that an Eclipse under the earth may have some effects ; which is no more then I say. Methinks Camparella confutes himself, in Lib. 2. Art. 3. Si Eclipse erit in Horizonte orientali incipit effectus, &c. (Card. seg. 7. Aph. 80, 81.) Now all men know, Horizon Orientalis is the East Angle ; and if a Solar Eclipse be there, how can it be visible ? if an Eclipse be there, and it have effects, how can it work or hurt nothing ? Cardan also, seg. 7. Apho. 76. intimates as much, Quibus Eclipse in Orientalis est Linea statim mutatio fit. These are Riddles : but Leovitiu, de Eclipsibus, doth positively unfold them : For he first erects the Scheam of a Solar Eclipse, falling in the Ascendant, and ten degrees from the Horoscope ; which Master George Wharton can no ways make to be visible ; yet he proceeds to deliver his judgement upon it : It happened anno 1556. the first of November, 18 hor. 26 min. post meridiem.

Wharton. And yet, forsooth, this pseudo-Prophet must needs prefer his own opinion, before the judgement of all sound Astrologers that ever writ ; neither quoting Author, nor tendering any reason, but his own private fancy, for what he saith.

Lilly. Your ill Language I passe by, and do say, It is lawfull for me, giving my reasons (as I have done) to make a probable Conjecture in the Art I do studie : and herein I follow the Rules of Divines, Physitians, and Lawyers, and of Protomey himself, cap. 8. lib. 2. Cum autem impossibile sit singularium mixtionum qualitates exponere, &c. Hac consideratio singularium Mathematici sagacitati & prudentie relinquatur. I gave Reasons why I judged, and they they such, as, if you confer with Doctor Neve, Doctor Maxfield, Master George Laudy, or Master Twyn Batchelor in Divinity, all now perhaps in Oxford; they will catechize you better, and tell you its necessary you study hard, lest such another foolery crack your shallow pate in Astrologie.

Wharton. But of this and the like absurdities heretofore published by Booker, Lilly, and others of the Brotherhood, I shall, God willing, take occasion to write hereafter more at large.

Lilly. I should be sorry to shame my self in Print, by venting Absurdities, and so would Master Booker. You may do well to answer Merlinus Anglicus, when you are past your A, B, C, and well entred into your Accidence of Astrologie: which when you have well learned, and arrived to a Grammar, be pleased to take notice that I have lately put forth the English Prophetick-Merlin, and would be glad you would divulge your learned Observations thereupon; which if you perform in as good Language as you have done this, I promise beforehand, you shall, by my silence, have the Victory: for I will onely contend in point of Learning, and not in multiplicity of ill Language; and so leave you to your Studie, which you had great need to follow, lest Master Booker and I laugh you out of your poor Astrologie.

AN
TO THE

Recceiving what want there is of an Ephemeris amongst us, Origanus being at forty shillings price; Argoll thirty eight shillings; Eichstadius fifteen shillings; and that many would be studious this way, but for want of such Books: I have advantured the transcribing of one whole yeer out of Eichstadius, the most exact now in being; and have so contracted the form, that it is equally portable with any Almanack.

An Ephemeris is no other thing, then a Book wherein is contained the true places of the Planets in Longitude and Latitude, for any day of the yeer at Noon; and by the rule of proportion, at any hour of the day or night.

Longitude shews the signe and degree any Planet is in.

Latitude, his distance from the Ecliptick.

You must understand, there are seven Planets: wit Saturn ♄, Jupiter ♃, Mars ♂, Sol ☉, Venus ♀, Mercury ☿, the Moon ☾.

There's also the Head of the Dragon ♀ and Tail ☊.

These are their proper Characters ♀ ☊.

There's also twelve Signes, so called and noted: Aries ♈, Taurus ♉, Gemini ♊, Cancer ♋, Leo ♌, Virgo ♍, Libra ♎, Scorpio ♏, Sagittarius ♐, Capricorn ♑, Aquarius ♒, Pisces ♓.

Libra ♎, Scorpio ♏, Sagittarius ♐, Capricornus ♑, Aquarius ♒, Pisces ♓.

There's also certain Aspects, as Sextill ✱, Quadrant □, Tryne △, Opposition ♂, Conjunction ♀: These also new Aspects, but of late found out, as Tredicil Td, Quintill Q, Biquintill Bq, Semisextill SS, Quincunx Vc: They that would see more, may peruse Master Wing his Almanack for 1645. or Master Bookers 1644. These Characters understood perfectly, you may the better and sooner come to the understanding of what follows. By the Moneth of January, I will make all cleer.

The upper line tels you, January hath 31. dayes.

The second line tels you the Aspects of the Moon, to the Planets, and their Motions; The outward Line, the Aspects of the Planets each to other.

In the third line, you finde Luna, Dragons-head, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sol, Venus, Mercury.

In the fourth you have Occid. Orient. &c. Occid. signifies the Planet under which the word is to be Occidentall, or that he sets after the Sun. Orient signifieth the Planet under which the word is to be Orientall, or to rise before the Sun.

In the fifth line you have Cancer, Virgo, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Capricorn, Sagittarius, Capricorn: That tels you the Signe any Planet is in the first day of January; as that the Moon, whose Character is placed over Cancer, is in Cancer; so the Dragons-head is in Virgo, Saturn in Aries, Jupiter in Taurus, and so of the rest, &c.

There are eleven Columns.

The first contains the dayes of the Moneth.

The second, the week-day Letter, or Dominicall, which is E this year.

The third, the degree and minute of that Sign the Moon is in every day at Noon.

The fourth, the degree of the Sign Caput Draconis is in.

The fifth, the degree wherein Saturn is at Noon, or else the time of day when the Moon comes to any Aspect with Saturn; and the Character of that Aspect.

The sixth, the degree wherein Jupiter is at Noon, or the the Aspect the Moon hath unto him, and the time when, and its Character.

The seventh contains the same for Mars.

The eighth doth the like for the Sun.

The ninth for Venus.

The tenth for Mercury.

The eleventh tells you what day and hour either Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sol, Venus or Mercury, have any Aspect to one another; and the Character of the same Aspect, &c.

Over against the first of January, in the second Column, I finde A; in the third, 12. 5. that is, twelve degrees and five minutes: viz. The first of January, being Wednesday, the Moon (whose character you see over the head of 12. 5.) is in twelve degrees and five minutes of Cancer.

Over against the third of January, in the third Column, you finde Leo; and under it, 9. 58. viz. The Moon is then in 9. 58. of Leo: and so you may go down all along the Moneth.

In the fourth Column, I finde the figure one; over it, Virgo, and over Virgo, the Dragons head: It tells you, The first of January the Dragons head is in one degree of Virgo.

Over against the first of January, in the fifth Column, I finde Quadrant 5. over the head thereof, Aries, Occid. Saturn: It points out unto you, that the Moon, at five of clock in the after-noon, comes to a Quadrant of Saturn, he, as you see, in Aries: And if you would know in what degree, see in the fifth Column, over against the second of January, and you finde 14. 55. the motion of Saturn being slow; if you substract four minutes from him, you shall finde Saturn to be, first of January, in 14. 54. of Aries. There's no necessity I be nice in scruples about him.

Against the third of January, in the fifth Column, you finde Tryne 9. viz. Saturn is in Tryne to the Moon that day at nine of the clock in the Afternoon.

In the sixth Column you finde, over against the first of January, Sextill 15. over its head, you may see Jupiter, Occid. Taurus: viz. Jupiter is that day, fifteen hours after noon, in Sextill Aspect with the Moon,

In the same Column, and next line below, you finde
21. 17. viz. Jupiter to be in twenty one degree and seventeen minutes of Taurus that day at Noon.

Against the third of January in the sixth Column, you have Quadrant 20. viz. That twenty hours after Noon of the same day, the Moon is in Quadrant Aspect with Jupiter.
For you must know, Astrologers ever begin their account of hours from Noon, reckoning till they come to twenty four, or to the next day at Noon: Usually men say, This or that was done at one of the clock in the Morning; now we say, It was thirteen hours Afternoon of the day preceding; and so two in the Morning is fourteen hours Afternoon.

In the sixth Column against the fifth of January, you finde Di; which gives you notice Jupiter then begins to be direct: and so of any other Planet where you finde Di.

If you see the word Sta. it tels you the Planet in whose Column you finde it is Stationary; the meaning whereof is, that he moves not for the present, but stands still.

Where you finde the word Re, or Retrograde; it tells you the Planet is going to be Retrograde, that is, he doth not proceed in motion according to his usuall manner, but backward; as if he be in twenty degrees of Aries
he goeth not on to the twentieth one of Aries, but backward into the nineteenth degree, &c.

I meddle not with the mean motion of the Planets, in what I am now about, because I labour to make all things plain to every capacity.

When Saturn is direct, he sometimes moves 2. 4. 6. 8.
seldom any more in one day, viz. in twenty four hours:
I have therefore posited his true motion but six dayes in the Moneth, about the beginning, middle, and latter end thereof; so that if you take his Diurnall motion any of those two dayes, and adde that proportion to his last place, you have his motion exact; as for example:

Against the fourteenth of January, under Aries, in the fifth Column you finde Saturn is in 15. 37. Aries.

Against the sixteenth day you finde 15. 45. (there's an Aspect

Aspect of the Moon falls the fiftenth day of January; so that his motion could not be put there) Now if you subtract 15. 37. from 15. 45. there remains eight minutes, which is the motion of Saturn in two dayes, the half being four minutes, added to 15. 37. is 15. 41. the true place of Saturn the fiftenth of January, &c. and so of the rest.

The motion of Jupiter being direct, is sometimes 6. 8. 10. 12. seldom above 14. minutes; if you observe the same directions in his motion as in Saturn, you erre not: As for example:

Over against the twenty eighth day of January, in the sixth Column, you finde 22. 11. Over against the thirtieth day in the same Column you finde 22. 20. the difference of one subtracted from the other, is nine minutes, the motion of Jupiter in two dayes; take four or five minutes, and adde to 22. 11, and it produceth Jupiter his place the 29. January, &c.

The motion of Mars is more swift; for he sometimes moves 30, 34, 36, or 40, minutes in a day, being direct, else not.

Against twenty ninth of January, in the seventh Column you finde 19. degree 9. minutes.

Against the thirtieth day, 19. 20. His motion you see is but eleven for one day; and this was, because he was lately Retrograde: If you adde 11. to 19. 20. they make 19. 31. the true place of Mars, 31. January.

The motion of the Sun is ever direct, and his Diurnall motion at sometimes is 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, minutes.

Over against the second of January, in the eighth Column, you finde 22. 50. the true place of the Sun for that day at Noon.

Over against the third of January, in the same Column, I finde 23. 51. if subtraction be made of 22. 50. from 23. 51. you may perceive the daily motion of the Sun to be at this time, one degree and one minute, or 61. minutes: if you adde one degree and one minute to 32. 51. it tells you, that the fourth day of January, at Noon, the Sun is in twenty four degrees and fifty two minutes of Capricorn, by adding this continuall proportion, tion, you have every day his exact place in the Zodiack.

The motion of Venus and Mercury are for the most part daily set down, except on those days where the Moon meets with some Aspect; and then you must observe what is their daily motion the day precedent: that added, makes the true place at Noon the day subsequent.

This I confesse, both Venus and Mercury have a more quick motion then the Sun; but Venus exceeds not usually 60, 66, or 70 minutes.

Mercury sometimes goes eighty minutes in a day, &c. but not usually; for the mean motion of Venus and Mercury are the same with the Sun.

The mean motion of the Moon is thirteen degrees, and somewhat more: she sometimes moves but eleven degrees and odde minutes; but usually, if for every fix hours in time, you adde or allow to her place at Noon three degrees, you shall not much erre in any question.

You must note, I have reduced the Change, Full-Moon, and every Aspect of the Moon to the Sun, exactly for the Meridian of London. In the Moon her Aspects to the other Planets, you must substract fifty minutes of one hour; and the remainder tells you the exact time of the true Aspect.

What is casually or otherwise now omitted, by reason of my many engagements, shall the next year (God Willing) be plentifully fulfilled. In the mean time, if any that are studious require satisfaction in this Art, I live at The three Flower-de-luces neer Somerset-House, and am called,

WILLIAM LILLY.

Oh Deus judicium tuum Regi da, & justitiam tuam filio Regis : Indicem populum tuum justè, & pauperes tuos jure.

THe many Aspects, and they malevolent in December preceding, may produce action enough for this, and some Moneths succeeding : Here's old sickling, and siding, party against party ; help me, and ile help thee, Semel insanavimus omnes : Shirk thou in thy place, in thy Office, in thy Command ; I have done pretty well in mine ; Hast thou cheated and squeezed sufficiently ? Many Officers tumbled headlong from their places, yet not a man breaks his neck for cozening of the Common-wealth. Here's some are curbed, others winked at ; perhaps the accounted wicked begin to smell knavery. Its observable, a Full Moon begins the Moneth, an Eclipticall concludes it : Let's hearken after a Town or Fort surrendered, perhaps to us. War and Action threatens the West, but some is intended for the South-East ; whether Sussex, Surrey, Kent, Bucks, or Bedford, its not positively known to me, or good we be lull'd a sleep, upon surmised rumors : A storm, a tempest is approaching ; is it in words or actions, Sol rising with Cauda Scorpii ; the Weather varies, mens mindes rage : What ? Alwayes Asses : Let Balaams Ass speak truth ; no body else will.

Some Scaffold, or Tyburn-matter preparing : Missives, and letters to little purpose. Sometimes very good news : could we unite, we should be brave Boys. Trotting and Trumpeting most part of this Moneth, if Rain and Snow hinder not. About the middle of the Moneth, Asellus Boreus, and Præsepe Acronically rise : Non exiguam significationem pluviarum habent. Stiff gales of Winde about 17, 18, 19 ; and we even sick with false reports. Some are preparing niceties for the Synod : Some mens tongues are no slander. A stratageme. High and mighty at Oxford ; yet we may hear from thence. Two Aspects the last day of the Moneth : Tempestatem efficiunt, not at Sea but at Land, and neer, if not amongst us. Twill work this next Moneth : We are molested by petty fellows. Here's plenty of injurious informations, slanders, false and unheard of Calumpnies : What ? Shall we be reputed unthankfull ? Now punish the treacherous ; but do Justice, and fear God. Long live Essex, Warwick, and Fairfax ; but let the Hannonian Hypocrite perish, and all his petty Whelps. Shall we never discern the Factious ? Must England be ruined to satisfy the Schismaticall ? If we trample down Monarchy, the fall of the Nobility follows, then of the Gentlemen, and last of all, cutting of Throats amongst our selves : Such a thing was long since prophesied. Lord God, let it not be in our age.

THIS slabbie Moneth begins with a square of Saturn and Venus, the Moon carrying her light to Mercury. Shall we be the occasioners of our continuall calamity, by discord, faction, private respects; rewarding honour with unthankfulness? Fiunt in mundo multa incommoda, cum sit utriusque luminaris Eclipsis uno in mense; the words of Hermes: There's somewhat to purpose will happen, when both the Lights are eclipsed in one Moneth. We again hear of, and hearken after Accommodations: Let's hope a good turn is coming now towards us. A Solar Eclipse is the 16 day: we lost in August, when the Sun was eclipsed in the opposite degree. A pretty blessing may betide us, if rightly managed. Some receive condemnation, or are sentenced. Things occultly managed, and false scandalous aspersions upon persons of quality, not the least actions of this Moneth. Now the North-west part of the West of England may be distressed. A man highly descended, in much anguish and sorrow. God blesse us from men and souldiers malecontented; men that have their wages ill paid, and yet have fought valiantly; and let Don Diabolo waste in his Ferry-boat: Those cowards never fight, yet are best paid. About these times, His Majestie may be doubtfull he is not well used by some very neer him: His private intentions are discoverable, his good intendments lessened by others. Much buzzing in the Synod, about some scruples. Some stinking news is brought, we dreamed not of; perhaps we may thank our selves: Want of providence, and remisse carelesnesse, is a fault: Men cannot live always upon winde. What becomes of our Moneys? Accuse all true-hearted Protestants, and say they smell of Maligo; its an ill method; observe the consequences: and yet tis now a plain case, &c. Let all Officers that have dipt their fingers in silver commands, give account, and we cannot want supply: But let the great ones lead the way first, and the little ones after. He that would have no Peace, is no Christian, though he be an Independant. He that would have no Treaty, is not our friend; but a publike enemy to England and Scotland, and hath his private ends. I like it not, when the Bramble would be King, or rule all. If there was priority in shirking, let there now by some Sanctified be as plentifull a restitution of what hath illegally been borrowed of the distressed Counties. There's a Bank of Money somewhere.

Non inimicus probro afficit me, non osor meus, sed tu mortalis par mihi, dux meus & familiaris meus.

THIS Moneth begins with an Opposition of the Moon. If His Majesty have and shall finde some most false about him, What shall we do? we can exceed him in number: ours are as treacherous as infernalls, Doegs, and Edomites: Perhaps we may snap up some of them this Moneth. Quarter grows scarce; the Souldiers wander: Its in agitation to come neer us: What, bearded to the teeth? Here's good words and speeches of Peace: Some persons of quality reconciled outwardly; Much and frequent entercourse of Letters for peace; its the conclusion I look after. Suddenly news from the Camp, or our Armies, or Quarters, or Garisons, not simply ill; then comes Venus with a squirting Tryne to Mars. I doubt we are abused and fooled, while we are held on with a pittifull discourse, and this neer the Suns entrance into Aries: Here's an appearance of knocking, skirmishing, quarrelling and fighting: Where the skin of the Lion failes, take a peece of a Fox tail. We have a hard task in hand: Some motion towards the North-East. Here's an unlucky design neer action: It may hap some great Commanders or Officers, may wish for Whartons directory Prognostication, that they may finde safety somewhere. Here's tossing and tumbling, and frighting one another in their Quarters. The East part of the West of England is much annoyed, or in danger by some Land-Rovers. Did we know our seasons, and were reall, the war would not be perpetuall. Amidst our broyls, we angle for Peace; some honest men do, but not all. This is a Paradox: Observe, if one fool, that never spake ten words without two lies, make not some scurvy division this Moneth: The Moneth ends as it begun, we are amazed and stand mute, loose time, loyter, and do nothing but quarrell: And now the Actions depending on the Lunar Eclipse begun to operate: others can make use of fit times, we not, the cause of a late disaster: Quo, quoscelsi ruitis? Aut cur dextro aptantur enses conditi? Are we in jeast or in earnest? Responsum date, a cerba fata Anglicos agunt: The English are almost wearied with War; but some hot Spirits cease not to molest us: We shall be inforced to take an other course. Thus was Scipio, the most vertuous of the Roman Captains, unthankfully rewarded by his untoward Citizens: but Caesar, not long after, taught the unruly more manners.

Ob Deus superbi insurgunt contra nos, & catus violentorum querunt vitas nostris.

AS men unapt for action, we tremble ; but are still mindfull to do what becomes us not. If Ptolomey speak truth, the Lunar Eclipse now begins to operate. Good, bad, and indifferent good, all at one time. Gods Name be blessed, we are not in all places and always unhappie. If from the South-west we hear our men and friends are in necessity, let's consider of it at leisure, till all's neer lost. Can valiant men but be sensible of slights and disrespects ? Well, perhaps news from Wales, Cheshire, and from the North-east. Here's probability of transforming Asses into Horses. Shall the insulting foe come to our noses ? What news from France ? Still feeble hopes, or overtures, or inclinations, or probability, of a monster called Peace. Now the Schismaticall speak to purpose, and others of the Fraternity, they know not what : No King, no Law, no Magistrate. Two fools, and one unsanctified knave, must rule an holy Assembly, in these mens fancies, or a whole Congregation, at least. All's not like to be well at Oxford ; there's discrepancy in judgement and affection : a Court not fully merry ; for part of this Moneths Victories belong to us. Doth it ? Nay, saith Vulpone, then the War will end too soon ; let's rather lose this opportunity. His Majestie need not fight ; here's robbing, stealing, purloining. If no ill happen, or is now intended for Scotland, I should be glad. Plenty of April showers, then hail, sudden storms, tempests ; preparation for some mischief by our enemies ; we as ill provided. His Majestie hath now better news then we : Hodie tibi, cras mihi. A Princely-conditioned man endangers his health, if not lie. The moneth's likely to conclude ill. Great men, be bold, but not too bold. The West I think will never be quiet. A kinde of Disease begins, not so mortall as once I conceived it ; bad enough. Not far from these times, if one Bullet hit right, our Wars are lessened, but not determined. Unkindly Weather, worse Action. The violent death of some principall man, or Magistrate. Expect news of a Fight, if our Armies be neer ; yea, to purpose, if our full Bodies be ready. An ominous time for many prime Commanders, draws on. If God blesse us with the attach of a Town, City, or surrender of a strong Fort, let's be contented.

THE Moneth no sooner begins, but action follows, without any great successe: New discontents arise amongst us. There's a generation of Liers will be alwayes knaves, and desire to fish in troubled waters. Here's probability of sentencing some Apostata Rennagado, such as have long betrayed us. Methinks here's some comfort to London; and some good news, or some Messengers, or Agents, Commissioners, or Embassadors, may arrive, or go to intercede or agitate for Peace, or a Cessation. A young twig of Noble descent is near a sicknesse, or casualty, by misfortune as bad. Here's much treasure, plenty of Ammunition, if no Forraign Forces come to the Parliaments enemies. Let us rest the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth of May, from fighting. Accidit in puncto: I smell Knavery from the South East; but were I a Pyrate, I should get most purchase South-West. Have we another Red Fox like Sir R. G. acting his close devotions to do our Army mischief? Lets be wary. Here's much action at places far distant. Why may not some unexpected disturbance arise by one Lunation: either now or never, a good cast for all: Why not some unusuall Apparitions affright us, about 22, 23, 24, 25? Memorable occasions may chance about these times; I assure you I shall much observe them, and the Motions of the latter part of this Moneth: I hope our Synod after some ruptures, goes on with cheerfulness. Perhaps some great man arrives here from some other Countrey: And a Town is either obtained or neer it, of some concernment: Sure its not Banbury Castle, or Newark. If Her Majesty went away upon a Conjunction of Sol and Jupiter, perhaps she may now be mindefull of returning, upon the like Aspect: Doubtlesse some returns come from Her. What? Money, Men, or Counsell. Here's disputing by inches, and playing knave by acres. Here's taking Money on our side, and fighting for no body; this is Vulpones Kinsman, a man of noble parts, if you beleieve his own Daddy. Let us pay deserving men, cowards can pay themselves. Great consultations, both the beginning and ending of this Moneth. Achitophell would hinder all: God prevent him. Thou art too light. 14. 15. Tempestas magna: Conturbatur aer ab Austro: Efficitque humidum & vento sum tempus. Circa 23. pluvias repentinis, fulgura & tonitrua timco: Fiat Aquilo & pluit; malum omen proventus vini. Stand to your Arms brave men: Its feared an Army or Brigade may move East ward, then wheel South-East. Friends now meet, and perhaps make one Body, &c.

IF the transit of Mars through Geminis, did in that little Astrologers blinde judgement G. Wharton, shew some ill to the City of London, and Master Booker desired to look to it; upon the Conjunction of Jupiter and Venus, both fortunes in that Sign, I may as well invoke Master Booker to expect a very good blessing to the Citizens thereof: I hope some good Angel may direct us to incline to a Cessation or a Peace, by mediation of Friends, as Embassadors, Commissioners, &c. Good pious Noblemen, (no Sectarists) well meaning Gentlemen: Here's no extraordinary malevolent configuration this Moneth: Perhaps we may Treat; and yet the tenth or eleventh of June may be casually unlucky to a Grandee of England, and he no mean one. Here's Motion of our Armies, and rambling to and again. The Heavens frown on our Enemies a while, and dissention kills us again, and impedes us in some Counties. Let us totally unite, there's great reason for it, and then if we fight, a victory steals upon us. Some have opportune assistance, else all will be lost. From the West or North West, we are promised good successe; and if I am not mistaken, after fifteen Moneths trouble, there's some good at hand to the Scottish Nation, or their Armies, and some vengeance dropping down upon Ireland, Some exchange of prisoners, and counterfeit men or Letters deceive us; whereby we are in some danger, and our Scouts bring ill Intelligence. Here's old roving, plundering, taxing, and some indeavour to make irruption into the Associate Counties, which now may be threatned, and so the South. June is for much good or hurt: Without doubt the day is ours, if God give us but wisdom to husband time well; we shall not be always unlucky. Our Enemies again multiply; but we are elevated in courage. The God of Heaven bless us, and our Armies, from a crooked black Knave, and Traytor. Its probable, we shall obtain some pillage, or plunder, if neatly we manage our Affairs. The Saylor needs not doubt of meeting with valuable Commodities, if now he steer North-East: Money is coming from beyond Sea. Kent look to thy self and Hayens: Sussex is carelesse, perhaps willing to be undone. Et humerus dexter Orionis cum sole mane atollitur pluvialisque minatur, & auram frigidiorum designat. Thunder and Lightning, sudden storms, 19, 20.

*Oh Deus exercituum restitue nos, & fac ut luceat facies tua ;
exponis nos contentioni vicinis nostris, & inimici nostri subsan-nant nos.*

Our Enemies prepare to purpose, while we dispute upon Atomes. The second day Venus transits the North Node of Saturn : the third day the Sun ; the Moon unluckily applies to Opposition of Mars. Some Generals are not far from a mischance : Wearied with expectation, Mercury brings news at length that all's not lost. Not long after, mens spirits are revived. The Ayr is cool, and the Stars whisper of a fight abroad, and a Storm or Tempest at home ; considerable Action, and our friends get Towns, Forts, or Castles, or else fire them. If our true friend in the Royall Army give downright intelligence, we will dispute the rest : A black day approacheth, if Armies are near, not inevitably fatall, but casuall unlucky. A horse, a horse, as nimble as the Winde, of what colour soever. The East and South-East may give buriall to the Corps of some extravagants : Beware of a Bo B, or a bubling. God blesse all my Friends in our Armies. Now for the liberty of England. Our greatest enemies lie in our bosomes, eat at our Tables, sit and consult with us ; we feed Serpents and Vipers, and His Majesty gives bread to the unthankfull. Discite justitiam : A Lunar Eclipse, but not visible ; we are unhappy if we get nothing by it : Perhaps some Sea fight, pillaging, plundering ; the storm falls upon the Western and North-West parts ; nor is the South absolutely free : a tumbling time ; hurliburlies in many places. The God of War is angry : Heres poor uncomfortable news to some ; Alasse what treachery do we discover in mens Actions, and falseness in mens Accounts : The State is cozened, our treasure conveyed to Utopia, and we are not so wise as Balaams Ass that once spake : We carry heavy Burthens ; But why kick we not, and inforce men to accompt for our Moneys ? My self was born free, Ile not be intralld by a fellow subject. Thou great one, that hast seven, eighth, or ninth of Virgo ascending, caveo : Receive thy punishment or finall ruine : Dishonour, &c.

Saturn is now Stationary, introducing unluckinesse enough to the Spoor Farmer, his stock and Cattle : Men again stumble upon words of Peace ; its like heres more exchange of prisoners. It may thunder about the fifth of the Moneth : We receive losse in the West, by want of providence ; but instantly after I trow, we have a better account, and more advantagious service : We are unhappy in our elections ; we chuse for affection , whilest meritorious sword-men are slighted, and impudent cowards totally countenanced. Here's vengeance at hand in one kinde or other. The eleventh day there's an Eclipse of the Sun, its above the earth, Master Wharton, its in the tenth House Sir : The actions demonstrable thereupon, will be ominous to persons of high quality ; Kings, Princes, Earls, Generals, Major Generals, Governours of Forts and Towns. Methinks here's noise of a fight ; and some gallant fellows accused for cowardize or neglects. Here's stirring to purpose, and fighting by turns ; here's surrendering one Town, and taking another. Now Generalls of Armies look to your charge : Some slanderous language invented by Tub-men, Anabaptists, and Independants : Here's either heading or hanging, I think : The effects of the Eclipse indure almost two yeers. The Plague ranges up and down, or some disastrous malady. By a little trick of treachery, and a sure invisible friend, we pump our enemies. I am now full of good hopes ; the Heavens appear clear many dayes together : If God Almighty give a blessing, our Generals of Armies may give an honourable account of this Moneths actions ; the Stars promise much : We make our Enemies trot, tremble and treat, fore against their wills. It may be hoped that now the Synod have trampled down the Independant Faction, and begin as well as they may, to settle Religion to purpose, though much struggling is against them. The Moneth may end with very good news.

*Vindicasti brachio populum tuum : Laudabunt te Cæli, & Terra, Maria, & quicquid repit in eis.
 Vēti cōmutātur, asper āq. in mare fit hiems, vētus movetur ab occasu.*

HOW sadly this moneth begins in some places ! What with sickness and accidentall casualties, our lives are miserable. His Majestie is abused, betrayed and flighted, or some of his principall Officers weep, mourn and lament ; for very little thrives with them : Here's one week, two weeks and three weeks, intend us good, and our enemies little comfort. The fifth of this moneth, there's a Sextile of Saturn and Jupiter omitted, I know not how, in my Prophetickall Merline : But see the ill luck, hot words, airy Letters, a prime man betrayed ; en & ecce, the Treason of some, and Loyalty of others. Let the west pay the Shot. We are Animals, if we gain not a Town, a Shire or two. Now Master Wharton his directory Prognostication would advance the Episcopall party. Quid rerum novarum in Cambria. Will the Sextile of Saturn and Jupiter produce no miracle, nothing of consequence, no storms at Sea, strange weather, division, horrible treasons ? If our sins be not extreme, we obtain a remarkable Victory. A turbulent moneth, unhealthfull, full of knavery ; Under colourable pretences, strange abuses. Plots, Treasons, Perjuries, words fair and foul : ill news, nay, its a Lye. A Town taken ; some thoughts of Peace in peoples mouthes ; windy speeches, blustering weather, tempests abroad. Some Divines or Gentlemen struggle against Authority. Kings, Princes, Generalls, great Officers, answer to your names, now ye are called. Distempered murmurings ; some of you great ones are neer danger. Shall our miseries never conclude ? Letters discovered, the Common wealths Caterpillers never. Private intentions found out. The State is cozened by Authority, none finde fault : we are all out of our wits. He loseth much, that loseth all. Here's monstrum horrendum approaching : Now oppression, bloodshed, plundering, rapine, violation of Articles. The rude Souldier swells ; a boysterous storm, stout fighting, some set field, wherein I'll not determine the day, but in private : Yet observe, the successe depending upon an Aspect this moneth, almost determines the War : its probably like to be for ever farall to two or three very great Persons and Commanders, Generalls, &c. Many a brave man loses his life ; its the forerunner of a Town to be taken long besieged. A King or no King, a Parliament or no Parliament, if God divert not the course of Natures. This must be understood warily ; for if God blesse us with Peace, swords will be turned into words, &c.— and where I now speak of fighting, it would then be arguing, wrangling and contesking, man with man, &c. Flat Aquilo, & in Mari tempesta est horrida.

*Tantummodo Deus frangit caput inimicorum suorum :
Libera nos ab inimicis nostris.*

Menſis fatalis ſen'li cuidam magno infideli & proditori.

A Buſie Seaſon : The Farmer oppreſſed Southward and Weſtward. Commodities grow ſcarce. More miſchief preparing. Freſh aſſiſtance may cauſe pride in our enemies. We are in danger again of Trealon, Plots, intestine and domeſtick failings and falling out : yet we buckle pretty handſomely, and loſe but little ground. What a ſhame is it Mercury will never leave lying ? Letters may come from the North : if they bring News of the taking 0000, I care not. The Scots now, if ever, may puzzle the Iriſh, and their home-bred ſeditious. Here's Miſchief again : Many priſoners taken ; that ſuppoſeth a Fight, or a curious Surpriſe. Men are now tumultuous and ſtubborn ; the people repine both at King and Parliament ; perhaps ſome peremptory Petition : The loſer hath reaſon to ſpeak. Nothing thrives with a wiſfull party. Continuall loſſes : nor is all honey with us : we are ſo uſed to diſtraction, its no matter which end thrives. Alms Ace may be caſt, whether his Maſteſtie or our State receive moſt hurt by obſtinate ſimple Animals, that would be wiſer then their fathers. A Plot is laying to betray ſome of our Forces : But who relieves the diſtreſſed ? God bleſſe the North eaſt. The 24 day is the preſage of much good or ill to a Family, a great one, and this in a ſmall compaſſe of time. God onely ſupports us. What's his name that may fall ſick, or gets a knock this moneth, or within three weeks of the next ?

I fear a Famine, Mortality, and what not ?

Can the 9, 12 and 13 or 31 paſſe, and diſcover nothing ?

Aut Cæſar aut nihil : Oh Reges & Principes potiſſimum ſub poſtrema parte Arietis, Leonis & Sagittarii nati, vos præ nimio aſtu ſudabitis : A vobis enim dominia rerum transferentur, gravesq; turbas a ſubditis veſtris experiemini unde trepidatio atq; fuga inſtabit : Maxima in politicis mutatio denuntiatur : magnatūq; ſecularium mors intenditur. Caveat Portugallia.

Here's rascals to purpoſe found out.

Have a care, Swedland ; the Comet will touch thee.

The Muſcovite and Polonian begin to ſwagger.

Menſis totius anni admirabilis ubiq; in tota Europa, ſive in multis Provinciis. Some City, Town or Caſtle is hard put to it this moneth.

Quid te jactas in malo, ô artifex doli : Deus demoliturus est te in aeternum : eradicabitq; te è terra viventium.

Here's plurality of fraudulent and cunning Missives sent, and we are abused with variety of Lyes. Here's hoped, some busie and nimble-fingred Accountants shall be committed to prison, and they acutely examined. These Publicans and common receivers strictly put to it, fleeced, squeezed : There's not any way so neat as this, to undo particular knaves, that have undone the generality. Son of man, look to thy self the third week in November, else a violent death may befall thee, or a mischief answerable to that of Master Booker my loving friends Premotion in March :

Metinks I hear strange motions in the West.

God blesse us from a Gun : you know the rest.

We are much perplexed with frivolous matters ; it were better we heeded the affairs of the Commonwealth. Some Gentlemen and other sturdy Nobility, meet with opposition ; we scarce believe fair words.

There's a greater matter in hand then all this. God blesse us.

Though we have many enemies, and not innumerable friends, yet let us not fear. Let us expect strange weather, strong windes, and blustering, at Sea ; stormy actions, sundry informations, and pretty accusations, at Land. Many questioned now, that formerly never feared it ; others called in question for their fidelity, while some escape : its good to cry Whore first. He is no little one that is in danger of a Fever ; he is not old, no childe, no man, no woman : in what Countrey this shall be, God knows. Towns strangely lost, or indiscreetly surrendered. Non minor est virtus quam querere parva tueri.

The last 19 of November, three Suns appeared : some unheard-of action ensues this 19, or very neer it. Is any Grandee surpris'd, captivated, or made shorter by the head ? About the 22 day, or not long after, expect news. We must do justice : if we forbear, behold what God Almighty doth.

The Spaniard thrives not, his Fleet comes short home.

London, beware of Seditious.

Cold weather and ill news conclude the Moneth.

Fam sativ' terris nivis atque dira gradinis, &c.

Ecce virum illum, qui confidebat amplitudini divitiarum suarum, roborabat se in substantia sua.

NOW many thieves and highway-men act Comedies at randome, and fresh division ariseth amongst the Nobles and Gentry. Every Officer storms at his neighbours good : if the Common-wealth had a tongue, she would accuse all. Some put to death, and they no mean ones. Informations plenty, Distractions to purpose, the matter is clearly proved, the man is guilty : but if the life of the Law be execution, what then ? Justice is gone to heaven. The little man dies for stealing a Sheep ; the great one steals ten Oxen, and yet is pardoned. Quod non vis tibi, ne facies alteri. One gives away a Citie, or surrenders a Castle, he's pardoned : A poor Souldier did but think of such a thing ; the poor man is hanged, the other escapes. Doth not God see this ? and is he not angry at this partiality ? Fiat justitia, & paret mundus. Let justice be equally distributed, and then thrive. Let high and low, great and small, satisfie the Kingdom how our moneys are gone, every man for himself, and not in generall. There are some Families stained with covetousnesse, might recover reputation, if this were done. Again Disturbance amongst us. Some single Duell, or parties fight and rove up and down, without controll. The yeer neither begun well, or ends with content. There's a Generation made a trade of jugling and shirking the Common-wealth ; a discovery is made of such fellows. I fear we may all go together by the ears. Here's mick chat of good, of Peace, of good News ; but some scurvie Letters discover all's knavery and treachery. Saturn is busie at Court, wheresoever it is, a cunning sneaking faction. Money is hard to come by ; some new Device, never before heard of, must be found out.

Fiat Pax.

A Table

The Explanation of the Table of Houses.

THis Table consisteth of twelve grand Columns, appropriated to the twelve Signes of the Zodiac in which the Sun doth daily move, viz. Aries, Taurus, Gemini, &c. Each of these grand Columns containeth seven lesser Columns, distinguished in this manner. In the uppermost line of every grand Column, and the first of the lesser Columns, you finde that Signe wherein the Sun is characted in this sort: Sol in Aries, Sol in Taurus, Sol in Gemini, &c. Then in the same line, and in the head of each Column, you finde 10, 11, 12. D. 1, 2, 3. which are the Houses mentioned in these Tables. In the second line, and first of the lesser columns, you see H. M. which stand for hours and minutes: and in the same line but in severall columns, you finde certain characters of the Zodiac, which characters are the signes of those Houses under which they stand; as when the Sun is in Ariete, or Sol in Ariete, the signe of the tenth House is Aries, of the eleventh Taurus, of the twelfth Gemini, of the first Cancer, of the second Leo, and of the third Virgo. The first of the lesser Columns of each grand Column, containeth the time from Noon in hours and minutes. The second, the degrees of that signe, characted in the head of that column, for the cusp of the tenth House. The third, the degrees of that signe mentioned in the head of that column for the cusp of the eleventh House. But if you finde two or more signes intercepted in any column, that next above the number sought, is the signe of the cusp of that House specified in the head of that column. The fourth containeth the signe and degrees for the cusp of the twelfth House. The fifth, the signe, degrees, and scruples or minutes for the first House. The sixth, for the second House. The seventh, for the third House. Having rightly perused what is here delivered, you are next to consider, there are twelve Houses, although in each of these grand columns six are only mentioned, from whence the other six must be derived; which is thus: Every House opposite to any of these aforesaid Houses is to have the same degrees with these in the Table; but the opposite signe. As for Example: I desire to erect a Figure the 12 of September, 1645, for twelve hours Afternoon; wherefore I must first know the Suns place that day at Noon, which, entering the Ephemeris, in the month of September, over against the 12 day, and in the column of the Sun, I finde to be 30 degrees sero of Virgo: Then I look into the Table of Houses, for that grand column appropriated to Sol in Virgo, and in the second lesser column of the same, till I finde 30, the aforesaid place of the Sun: against which 30, I finde in the first lesser column 12 hours 0 from Noon, which I add to my first-given number 12, which make 24 hours: Then do I proceed in the first lesser column of each grand column, till I finde my additionall number, 24. (Nota, if your additionall number exceed 24, you are to subtract 24, and to look for the sum remaining, as aforesaid) which I finde in the grand column of Sol in Pisces; and in the same line, but second column, I have 30 degr. of Pisces for the tenth House, whose opposite must be Virgo 30 for the fourth: Proceeding in the same line to the third column, I finde Taurus the signe intercepted; but next above, my number 12, for the eleventh House, whose opposite must be Scorpio 12 for the fifth House; in the fourth column, Gemini 29, for the twelfth House, whose opposite is Sagittarius 29; for the sixth House, in the fifth column, Cancer 27 2, for the first, whose opposite is Capricorn 27 2. for the seventh; in the sixth column, Leo 16 for the second, whose opposite is Aquarius 16 for the eighth; in the seventh column I finde Virgo 5, for the third, whose opposite is Pisces 5, for the ninth House. Having thus done, you are to place the Planets in this Scheme, which is in this sort: Look into your Ephemeris for the month and day of September aforesaid, against which day you finde the places of all the Planets at Noon: But seeing your time is 12 hours Afternoon, you are to take the whole diurnall motion of them, which is done by subtracting their places that day from the day subsequent, and then work the same by proportion; As for Example of Mars: The 13. day he is in 30. deg. 47. min. of Libra. The 12. day he is in 30. deg. 6. min. of Libra. So his Diurnall Motion, is 0. 41. minutes. Then say If 24. hours give 41. minutes, what shall 12 hours give? Multiply and divide, and you shall finde 20. minutes and a half, to be added to 30. degrees 6. minutes, which makes 20. degrees 26. min. for the true place of Mars in Libra, the 12. September, 1645. 12. hours Afternoon, which I place in the fourth House, because I finde the Signe Libra there, though intercepted, and so of the rest, placing each Planet in that House, wherein you see the Signe in which the Planets is in the Ephemeris, as by the Figure you may more plainly perceive in Page 88.
